N. Y. to Constantinople
The Babe and Voltaire
If the People Knew How
Deadly Gas? We Need It
—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1928, Star Co.

AS YOU READ THIS the army monoplane, Question Mark, has been in the air 100 hours, taking supplies of fuel from a smaller plane to feed its three Wright Whirlwind motors. The pilot, by this time, would have flown from New York to Constantinople and part way back.

Twenty years ago this writer suggested airplanes of the future, gigantic machines going round and round the earth, dropping passengers at Paris, Peking, etc., taking on supplies from smaller planes.

The suggestion was called "ridiculous" then.

Soon it will be reality.

What men can imagine, they can do.

Babe Ruth, weight 234½ pounds, playing handball to reduce, says: "I am 35 years old, still have five years to play." That's the worst of depending on your legs and arms, young gentlemen.

Depend on your brain, and at 40 you are just starting.

Goethe wrote the second part of "Faust" at 72; Voltaire was at his best at 82, although he weighed 129 pounds less than Babe Ruth weighs.

The Rockefeller Foundation and the Laura Spellman Rockefeller Foundation, established in memory of the late Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, have been consolidated, totaling $264,602,447—more than it cost to build the Panama Canal. It is by far the greatest sum ever set aside for philanthropic purposes.

The people of this country could set aside 10 times as much and not feel it. They haven't the brains to do that and are fortunate in having a Rockefeller family to do it for them.

A German professor, lecturing on the horrors of future war with deadly gas employed, caused a audience to shed tears. It takes something to make people mind need tears after the Kaiser's war.

Some of our people will shed tears also. Those in Washington that have brains enough should find out exactly what gas the professor meant and get some of it. We need it, not for attack, which is not in our line, but for defense and, if necessary, for retaliation.

This nation should "eye" warships, submarines, fast cruisers and every possible war device, and say to other nations: "Keep away from us, if you are wise. We can destroy you here in America, and destroy you where you live."

If you like big things, this will suit. Thomas B. Campbell of Hardin, Montana, "America's largest wheat grower," undertakes the planting of 10,000,000 acres of Russian land with wheat and flax.

Planting 10,000,000 acres under government supervision would be new. Instead of government helping the farmer it would be a case of the farmer helping the government.

The Russian enterprise would call for $100,000,000 worth of American agricultural machinery, interesting to buyers of harvester stocks.

More than 5,000,000 shares of stock sold in Wall Street again yesterday. About 15,000,000 in the first three business days, and "call money" dropped to 6 per cent in spite of bigger brokers' loans.

The professional bear may have to hunt up another "business."

First the Cunard line, then Japanese steamships decided to run between New York and Havana, taking their profitable thirsty business from American ships.

New York's gangsters, annoyed by Police Commissioner Whalen, threaten to go to Chicago.

There they will find an inhospitable police commissioner named Russell. He says: "We will ship them back in nice pine boxes," adding "A coffin a day will keep the New York thugs away."

Democrats in the national campaign spent a little more than $5,000,000. Republicans spent a little more than $6,000,000. Republicans got the money and paid their bills. Democrats still owe $1,297,291. Not so easy for losers to collect.

'DUMMY' DONORS TO SPORTS FUND MAY FACE GRILLING

'Defense' Attorney at Sports Probe Passes Lead to Fight Bilodeau

JOSEPH P. WALSH

FREE PASSES USED AT BRAVES FIELD IN DRIVE TO ELECT SENATOR

Between 5000 and 7000 of these baseball tickets, good for seats at Braves Field and bearing on the reverse side an exhortation to vote for Walter E. "Stonewall" Jackson, the Braves' "build-er-es" announcer, were distributed by the ball club in Lister, to help defeat State Senator Thomas H. Bilodeau, ardent opponent of Sunday sports. Attorney Joseph P. Walsh brought out this testimony and Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner is investigating.

ATTY.-GEN. WARNER OPENS STATE PROBE

Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner began a broad investigation of Sunday sports slush fund charges against the Boston Braves today, while Judge Emil Fuchs, president of the baseball club, speaking by the telephone from New York, hotly denied the accusations.

The attorney general said he was investigating the charge that the Braves, to put over Sunday sports in Massachusetts, created a campaign fund of $30,000 and drew up a list of dummy contributors to hide its interest, in violation of the Corrupt Practices law.

He is also going to probe, he said, the free distribution in Dorchester of thousands of tickets to Braves Field with a political "ad" on the back urging the election of Walter E. ("Stonewall") Jackson, Fenway Park announcer, in place of State Senator

THREE NEW LU DEATHS AT SOLDIERS' HOME

With three new deaths at the Chelsea Soldiers' Home, bringing the total of such fatalities to seven and with Boston's influenza sick list announced as increasing 20% per cent since Dec. 22, city and state authorities today united in a drive against the further spread of the disease in Massachusetts.

The Boston Health Department reported 223 cases of influenza recorded during the week ending today. The death rate, however, was low. Only four cases were fatal.

The department does not consider the disease to be "epidemic" as yet.

Figures from the State House months ago, reiterated that they showed 145 influenza cases reported from various parts of the Commonwealth today as compared with 169 reported yesterday. The total for the first five days of this month is 633 cases, as compared with 475 arable.

Doug, Jr., to Wed Joan Crawford

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 5 (INS)—Joan Crawford, film star, today announced that she would become the bride of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and go to France and Italy on a honeymoon.

At the same time the couple, who have been "confidential" as yet, announced their engagement some months ago, reiterated that they will be married now, although Miss Crawford wears a platinum ring, a gift of her fiance.

Both are working together on the screen at present and are almost inseparable.

SAVE LOVE SLAYERS FOR WEEK

Franklin, La., Jan. 5 (INS)—Mrs. Ada Bonner LeBeouf and her sweetheart, Dr. T. S. Dreher, have another week to live.

Condemned to be hanged at noon today for the murder of Mrs. LeBeouf's husband, they were reprieved by Governor Huey P. Long within an hour of the time for their execution. He granted a stay until next Saturday. Meanwhile, efforts will be renewed by defense counsel to have them judge insane so they can escape the death penalty.

Never in the South's criminal history has such confusion and complication existed as over the hanging.

IRATE LANDLADY ABS BOARDER IN $1 HEFT

Infuriated because she claimed her boarder had stolen $19 from her, Mrs. Margaret Carlson, 35, of Charles st., Lynn, today stabbed Patrick Delacy, 34, in the neck, police said. Carlson was reported dying at the Lynn Hospital.

Mrs. Carlson, who the police say confessed, was placed under arrest on a charge of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon. If Delacy dies the charge will be changed to murder.

According to police, Mrs. Carlson, who is divorcing, became involved in an argument with Delacy, and broke a bread knife over it into his neck. Her son, John, disarmed her and helped the police. Delacy was taken to the hospital, where his condition is reported on the danger list.

Boy Skater Drowns in Waltham

Robert Curtin, seven, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Curtin, of Morton st., Waltham, was drowned today when he broke through thin ice on the Charles river near his home. His brother, Thomas, 12, almost lost his own life in a rescue attempt.

The boys were skating alone at "the cove" off South st. Robert ventured out on the ice of the main channel. Thomas called a warning, then followed the younger boy to bring him back.

When he had almost reached the farther shore Robert crashed into the water. Thomas extended a hockey stick, but as Robert caught it the ice gave way.

Only after a long struggle did Thomas succeed in saving himself. He managed at last to climb out on the ice and there fainted from exhaustion.

He does not know how long he was unconscious, but he was still lying on the ice when he regained his senses. He got to his feet and staggered toward home. In the way he collapsed again.

Edward Noonan, a letter carrier, carried Tom to the pumping station nearby. Dr. C. Benjamin Fuller revived Thomas.

Police failed to find the drowned boy's body. Dragging began.

3 BOYS IN BOAT CAUGHT IN MERRIMACK ICE JAM

Haverhill, Jan. 5—While a huge crowd looked on and police and volunteer boatmen battled vainly to reach them, three boys today drifted down the Merrimack river here in a battered skiff jammed among logs floes of floating ice.

The boys were believed to be James Gardella, 15, of Washington st.; Helton Hayes, 16, of Washington st., and Louis Serronetti, 12, of Vine st.

Motorcycle Officer William J. Murphy had charge of the relief forces. Other members of the police department assisted him, as did ently the ice cakes, coming down stream, surrounded the boat and cut it off from ashore.

When the plight of the boys was discovered their craft was 200 feet from land. Due to some freak of the current, the ice limit to which they were caught was almost stationary. Nearer shore, however, the flow of the river was swifter and ice floes whirled and tossed as they passed, making it impossible for rescuers to get to midstream in boats.

Without delay Officer William J. Murphy had charge of the relief forces. Other members of the police department assisted him, as did workers from a nearby ice storage house.

WARNER ASSIGNS AIDE TO SUNDAY BASEBALL SLUSH FUND PROBE

DONORS MAY BE SUMMONSED BY FINANCE COMMISSION

Thomas H. Bilodeau of Dorchester, a vigorous Sunday ball opponent.

Warner called for a transcript of the evidence before the Finance Commission, the source of these developments, and assigned Asst. Atty.-Gen. Gerald Callahan to work with him on the inqury.

As the Braves' management, accusers of 13 City Councillors in bribery charges before the Finance Commission, became the subjects of this state investigation, President Fuchs made his general denial, in the course of which he declared:

"As long as the money was legitimately spent, I don't think it was material who contributed; every penny that was raised was spent legitimately."

There is a possibility that many of those on the list of alleged "dummy" contributors will be called before the Finance Commission, and it is considered more than likely that they will be questioned by Atty.-Gen. Warner in the course of his inquiry.

The Attorney-General said one of his first efforts will be to ascertain "whether any individuals violated the law."

"On the surface, certain aspects of the case look bad and warrant investigation," he added.

Fund Charge by Walsh Involves Fuchs, Carroll

The accusation that the Braves, through an organization known as the Outdoor Recreation League, contributed $30,000 and hid behind a list of "straw" donors, was made at the Finance Commission hearing on the ball club's charge that City Councillors asked $65,000 to legalize Sunday ball in the Hub.

"My associates and I did not raise a slush fund to put the Sunday sports law across in Massachusetts," said Judge Fuchs today when called on the telephone by a representative of the Boston Evening American.

"There was absolutely nothing wrong in anything the Braves did. We did nothing improper, either directly or indirectly, and have nothing to hide.

"I am willing that our books shall be produced. The whole thing is being camouflaged from another direction. There isn't a thing that anyone has to worry about.

"I have come here (to New York) to visit my mother who is ill, but I will be back in Boston soon."

The list of alleged "strawmen," submitted to the Finance Commission by Attorney Joseph P. Walsh, counsel for City Councillor William G. Lynch and for Daniel J. Carroll, fight manager, became the talk of sportdom today.

Attorney Walsh said he would show that Judge Fuchs told Dan Carroll he was going to put Carroll down for a $500 mythical contribution on the list, which the Braves' management certified and filed with the state election authorities.

Jackson Votes Sought on Braves' 3rd Base Passes

Contribution of more than $1000 by any individual to a political cause is against the law. On the certified list the Braves contribution was limited to that amount.

When it came to Attorney-General Warner's attention that the contributions were made under the name of the Outdoor Recreation League, he remarked that he once before had to step in and compel the league, under a threat of prosecution, to comply with the corrupt practices law by filing a list of their officers with the Secretary of State.

As a result of these developments, the charges that the city council boss demanded $65,000 were more or less submerged in the spectacular rebuttals of the counter-charges against the Braves.

Secretary Cunningham admitted that he gave $50 in cash, admitting under direct questioning by Chairman Bowling, who accused him of concealing something, to retire the Braves. He explained that he knew the Lord's Day league was investigating Sunday baseball at that time and he did not want them to trace the contribution to the Braves.

The Braves secretary also admitted under cross-examination that the management had given from 500 to 700 free tickets to Walter Jackson, known to fans as "Stonewall," the manager, who distributed them among the voters of the Dorchester senatorial district with the hope

tion, "Vote for Jackson."

Atty. Walsh when questioned as to his reason in submitting the list explained, "I shall show, sir, that Mr. Fuchs told Daniel J. Carroll that he was using his name, Carroll, as a contributor for the sum of $500 to Sunday baseball and that Fuchs admitted that he had expended $30,000 for Sunday baseball and certain sums more was not the truth but that for had spent more and that the concern called the Outdoor Recreation League of Massachusetts had presumably subscribed $30,000 and that the members of that league were names put on as having subscribed sums of $5000 to $1.00 and that the great majority of the men whose names appear on the certificate before the Secretary of State is not the truth and that Mr. Fuchs' credibility as a witness is to be severely attacked. And I shall offer no part of my case before I am through the certificate of the Secretary of State, all of which is bearing on the credibility of Mr. Fuchs."

Many of the men whose names appeared on the list filed at the State House declared that they had contributions to the fund.

John J. Ryan, proprietor of the Harvard Pharmacy at Longwood and Huntington ave., said that he contributed $1000 towards the fund. Ryan is the man who sponsored Aloysius De Sol at Fenway Park last summer and headed the list of contributors to buy a gift for the Red Sox center fielder. He is a dyed-in-the-wool baseball fan and attends the big league games at both parks daily during the season.

At the home of James P. Balfe in Dorchester it was said Balfe was ill, but his wife asked him whether or not he was a contributor to the fund to put over Sunday baseball and he sent back word he had made a small contribution. His name appears on the list filed at the State House as having given $100. Balfe is chairman of the trustees of stables at City Hall.

Arthur L. Race of the Copley-Plaza, who is on the list for a contribution of $1000, was asked whether he gave this amount and he replied: "That's my business. I don't see why anybody should be interested in what I do. If the record shows it, let it speak for itself."

Joseph W. Reilly, treasurer and general manager of the Buck Printing Company, issued the following statement:

"In view of the publicity given the Buck Printing Company in the Sunday baseball investigation, I desire to say it has always been the policy of company to be neutral on all questions, and this policy continues as long as the present control is in existence. We could ourselves no reasonable significance in the items in question."

Secretary Cunningham of the Braves said that William F. Dorgan, the contributor of $1000 from whom he looked at were obliged to accommodate the crowds, but the committee rooms at the State House that he looked at were found too small and the place a suitable one upon.

The scene of the Finance Commission's "strike" hearings, which will shift from the Gardner report was announced today.

Out of the total collection that Harvard has received they have suffered the loss of 400 volumes destroyed by a fire in 1764.

The survey also shows that the library each year receives on the average of at least $45,000, and the average gain of books total up to about $54,000 annually.

'TEX' HAS TURN FOR BETTER

Rickard's head. Then the doctor left from the room.

In the field to save the sports promoter a plane was sent to Havana, Cuba, today for Dr. William Mayo, famous surgeon. Dr. Mayo planned to fly to Rickard's bedside this afternoon.

This morning Dr. H. E. Adkins, the surgeon who performed the appendicitis operation on Rickard said the promoter was "slightly better."

Mrs. Rickard was slightly better this morning, but his condition is still critical," said Dr. Adkins. The inflammation has subsided slightly. Rickard's temperature and pulse were much favorable this morning. His pulse was 124 and his temperature 102.4-10. Last night when the promoter suffered a relapse his temperature was 104.4 and his pulse 140.

RESTFUL SLEEP

Walter Fields, intimate friend of the promoter, who relieved Mrs. Rickard at the bedside early today said Tex had a restful sleep most of the night and upon awakening requested the fresh latter than as was done after the operation."

Mrs. Rickard left the hospital immediately this morning at the insistance of attendants that she get much needed rest. She refused to leave until Dr. Adkins had assured her that her husband's condition showed improvement.

In one of the previous measures adopted against the "flu," the authorities have been getting too eager cooperation, they announced today. They asked that railroads and railways stop overdoing the business of ventilating street cars and train coaches.

Health Commissioner George H. Bigelow declared:

"The officials of the transportation companies have apparently cooperated with us but from the number of complaints received, it would appear that some of the officials of concern operating employes are attempting to make the question of proper ventilation ridiculous by overdoing it.

"We have complaints of cars in which not only the roof ventilators were open but also front and back doors and some of the windows. This is, of course, preposterous, as we said that open roof ventilators and open rear window gives adequate exchange of air."

LOVE SLAYERS ARE RESPITED FOR WEEK

The procedure started last night when Chief Justice Charles A. O'Neill of the Louisiana Supreme Court ordered a stay of the execution. He so telephoned Sheriff Pecot here. Four other justices dissented with O'Neill, however, and notified Pecot to go ahead with the execution at noon.

LAST MINUE RESPITE.

During the early morning hours Governor Long phoned Pecot to delay the hanging. The sheriff was in a quandary. He didn't know which authority to obey, but after some deliberation announced the execution was off. Later Governor Long again got Pecot on the long distance and told him he had withdrawn his reprieve.

The missives signed by. The condemned pair were resigned to their fate.

The phone in Pecot's office rang. It was Governor Long on the wire for the third time. He told the sheriff of the reprieve until next Saturday.

Upon receiving the second reprieve from the Governor, Pecot at once started off to the jail. They had not started preparing for their death march because of the uncertainty. Prisoners were exhaustion and were on their cots when the sheriff brought the good news to their cells.

CHEERED BY NEWS

"O merey . . . I hope it's true this time," Mrs. Leboeuf moaned. She was near collapse.

"Thank God, oh thank God," said Dreher.

The crime for which Mrs. Leboeuf and Dr. Dreher were to pay today was one of the most brutal in the state's history. The woman's husband was riddled with bullets and his corpse was slit open. Then it was weighted down at the head and feet and tossed into the murky waters of Lake Palourde, near the small town of Morgan City, La.

Jim Beedle, a trapper, pleaded guilty to the actual commission of the crime and was given a life sentence, which he is now serving.

PAY BOOST ALL OFF IN LYNN

Lynn city employes won't get the pay boost they've been hoping for—and they're lucky if they hold their jobs.

That was Mayor Ralph S. Bauer's New Year message to his underlings today.

Acting to forestall a rumored demand for a general increase in salary, the mayor announced that present wage rates will stand and he is about to survey every city department and lessen them by laying off as many workers as possible.

"Hundreds of families are in want in Lynn because of industrial depression," Mayor Bauer declared. "The city needs to save its money to help out such unfortunates."

Buckley Arraigned On Liquor Charges

Columbus, O., Jan. 5 (AP)—State Treasurer Hoyt H. Buckley pleaded not guilty on each of 10 counts charging conspiracy to violate the national prohibition act when arraigned before Federal Judge Benson W. Hough today.

John L. Schrimpf, Cincinnati attorney and former state legislator, indicted jointly with Buckley, pleaded guilty.

'Camouflage' Says Fuchs to Walsh

CATCHING Atty. Walsh's hot drive today, President Emil Fuchs of the Braves tossed back a charge of "camouflage" over the long-distance phone wires.

"The whole thing is being camouflaged from another direction," was Judge Fuchs' return shot.

"My associates and I did not raise a 'slush fund' to put the Sunday sports law across in Massachusetts. We did nothing improper, either directly or indirectly, and have nothing to hide.

"I am willing that our books be produced. As long as the money was legitimately spent I don't think it is material who contributed. I'll be back in Boston soon."

What's Next Move in the Slush Fund?

ALLEGED "dummy" contributions to a Sunday sports "slush fund" were wondering today whether or not they would be summoned to testify before the Finance Commission and tell whether they actually gave he sums they are credited with in the list the Braves certified to State authorities.

As the Finance Commission now looks at this matter, these men will probably not be called, because the commission understands that Atty.-Gen. Warner is investigating the "slush fund" phase of the baseball investigation.

But should something unforeseen develop, as it very likely may, as the commission admits, the largest contributors will be called as witnesses.

J. J. Wright of Hingham, according to the police, "borrowed" his mother-in-law's flivver two years ago, traded it in for a new car, and drove off to parts unknown.

The authorities and the motor sales company have been hunting for him ever since.

$100,000,000 SMUGGLED IN FIVE YEARS

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 5 (AP)—A dispatch to the Globe today from Ottawa says:

"One hundred million dollars worth of alcoholic beverages has been smuggled from Canada to the United States since the anti-smuggling treaty between the two countries was signed less than five years ago. The illicit traffic has steadily increased until this year it has exceeded $100,000,000."

The dispatch adds that for this reason United States Coast Guard and prohibition officials are en route to Ottawa to confer with Canada officials concerning possible revision of the treaty. The conference will open Monday.

The dispatch gives the following tables of exports of Canadian alcoholic beverages by recent fiscal years:

Year.	Total.	To U. S.
1924.....	$11,854,175	$8,511,709
1925.....	16,725,533	11,610,169
1926.....	21,207,777	12,207,777

The dispatch adds:

"To these figures must be added exports from Canada of Scotch whiskey, French wines, etc. In the last fiscal year these totaled to the United States $7,439,741.

The Globe in another story today says:

"Recent organized effort of the big booze interests to induce the Ontario liquor control board to sell direct for the export trade has met with first failure."

The board refused to have anything to do with the proposition and gave warning that it would not be approached on the matter again.

The Globe adds: "The booze men also assured the board that under their proposed arrangement they would buy supplies from the board and it alone; that they would take over all shipments from the board's storehouse to points of destination, and the expense pertaining thereto, and that they would be 'on' the Quebec booze, which is now sold by the board, only limited in large quantities and being short-circuited in many instances to find ready sale, particularly along the Detroit waterfront."

According to the Globe, the man who approached the board said that "American customers" were prepared to pay "fabulous" prices for "good safe brands," and that the Ontario liquor control board would be told more than regular prices.

WANTS TO CLEAR UP ALL LEGAL TANGLES

Because of a legal tangle that has arisen, Cesar Cero, convicted to die in the electric chair for the murder of Joseph Fantasia, may be further respited.

Cero has been twice reprieved. His present respite expires at midnight next Tuesday.

After a conference today with Attorney Joseph L. Warner and Frank A. Brooks, chairman of the state parole board, Governor Allen let it be known that Asst. Dist. Atty. William H. McDonnell contemplates going before the grand jury to ask for the indictment of an individual and that a motion for a new trial before Judge Cox has not yet been heard.

The Governor's position is that if anything of a legal nature is hanging fire affecting the condemned man at the time of the expiration of the present reprieve, respite should be extended. He will call a special meeting of the council on Tuesday to grant a further stay, if the circumstances warrant it.

It is possible, the Governor declared that the grand jury might hear and deny the request for an indictment on Monday and that Judge Cox might hear the motion for a new trial on Tuesday.

He indicated he would not intervene in the event that all legal steps are disposed of.

EMPLOYES FLEE $7000 FIRE IN SOUTH BOSTON

Two employes were driven to the street and damage estimated at $7000 was caused by a fire started by a spark from a misfiring machine motor in the paint and varnish factory of the Sta-Rite Products co., East First st., South Boston, today.

Because of the location with a filling station and a warehouse near by, two alarms were sounded, with both Chief Daniel Sennott and Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman responding.

Fearful of fumes, the firemen broke all windows in the building and then fought the chemical-fed flames with hoselike, bringing the blaze under control in a comparatively short time.

MANY IN PERIL AS HORSE DIVES INTO WINDOW

A runaway horse, dragging a coal and ice delivery wagon, today crashed through the plate glass window of the drug store at 236 Sumner st., East Boston.

Benjamin Avone, proprietor of the store, was slightly injured by flying fragments. The horse went all the way into the store. Police officers unharnessed the animal and led it out through the front door.

The runaway had its beginning when Albert Naumann, driver of the horse, left it standing outside his house on Noble ct. while he ate lunch. Frightened by an automobile, the animal plunged toward Webster st., then turned the corner to Sumner st.

Several groups of children narrowly missed being struck. Approaching Avone's store, the frantic horse crossed the sidewalk and hit the window at full speed. The wagon jammed.

The horse itself was cut by glass and treated by a veterinary.

RUM PROBE IN NORTH SHORE CITY OPENED

Prompted by rumors and by published charges of connivance between its police force and local bootleggers to openly violate the prohibition laws, federal authorities today initiated an investigation of liquor traffic in a North Shore city.

Asst. U. S. Atty. Hubert C. Thompson, in charge of the probe, plans to interview public officials of the municipality within a week.

Thompson's attention has been called to public charges of "rampant rum-running" in the city in question; daily "bombobling" of the local police with bootleggers and the existence of liquor "joints" within a stone throw of police headquarters.

He also has information relating to alleged retention of liquor warrants for a length of time sufficient to permit the removal or destruction of their contraband by bootleggers, with consequent result of a fruitless raid when the warrants were served.

Thompson will check up on the number of raids made by the local police over the past two years, the evidence presented against the operators of the raided premises, their record of convictions and the dispositions recommended by prosecuting officials.

In addition to questioning those whose charges have publicly come to his notice, Atty. Thompson will entertain complaints from any others who can assist him in the probe, but who, because of their anonymous communications to his office, are unable to be reached personally by him.

SMASHES AIR RECORDS

COMMANDS QUESTION MARK

Maj. Carl Spatz, who takes his meals and gets his sleep in midair, is now on his fifth day of his endurance flight in U. S. Army plane and will soon have stayed in the air longer than any other human being has ever stayed. This International Newsreel photo was taken before the flight started.

QUESTION MARK STRONG ON 5TH DAY'S FLIGHT

Metropolitan Airport, Los Angeles, Jan. 5 (AP)—The monoplane Question Mark kept on grinding out aviation history today as its endurance flight continued for the fifth day.

Completing its 96th hour in the air at 7:26 a. m., the army monoplane began to get within striking distance of the endurance record of 118 hours established by the French dirigible Dixmude. The feat of keeping an airplane up long enough to break the endurance record of a lighter-than-air machine—an idea which heretofore has been considered fantastic—thus appeared within reach.

The Question Mark took on 150 gallons of gasoline at 7 a. m., in contact with refueling plane Number One and then was reported to be in excellent condition.

Refueling plane Number Two took the air shortly afterward to deliver breakfast, oil and mail to the endurance plane's crew.

Fleecy clouds swirled above the airport here this morning as the sun tried to break through and warm the chill of the ocean breeze.

Despite the slightly unfavorable weather, Maj. Carl Spatz, commanding officer of the ship, gave no indication that he would turn southward in search of a warmer clime. The crew still remembered their harrowing passage over the mountains to Imperial Valley on the third day when the baffeting of winds caused their gasoline to run dangerously low.

Revere Reports Few Crimes of Violence

While arrests for minor offenses have increased in Revere during the past year, the city has been singularly free of crime of violence, according to the report of Chief of Police Edward J. Tighe made public today.

The report showed 1057 arrests for 1928, an increase of 21 over 1927. Arrests for auto violations were 435, and there were 229 arrests for drunkenness, an increase of 35. Chief Tighe said 50 per cent of those arrested were residents of other communities.

Slew Man Who Sold Liquor to His Father

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 5 (INS)—Orrin H. Hoover, 17, a quiet, mannerly high school boy, shot and killed Joseph Skalnanckas, 28, because he had sold the boy's father liquor—but Young Hoover could not have shot himself afterwards, Coroner H. Wolfe declared today.

Myrtle Skalnanckas, Mr. Joe's wife, was the only other person in the house at the time and she may have shot Orrin for revenge the death of her husband, the coroner asserted.

The trip was to be made over back roads across the Green Mountains, and Pulsifer did not expect to reach his destination before night. Pulsifer will remain at Enosburg Falls tomorrow and plans to cross the Canadian border Monday.

'TIM' CONNOLLY PERISHES AS HOME BURNS

Trapped by flames on the second floor of his home at 4 Ambrose st., Roxbury, Timothy L. Connolly, 55, former president of the old Common Council of Boston, once a big power and picturesque figure in city politics and a former champion bicycle rider, was burned to death early today.

Firemen found his body, partly clothed, in front of a coal stove in the kitchen. He lived alone in the house, a two-story brick structure.

Five men, sweeping a large part of the house when firemen arrived, but they forced their way in. It is believed that Connolly had started to dress in preparing to leave the house, but had been overcome by smoke before he could get out.

The body was taken to the Southern Mortuary at City Hospital, where it was examined by Medical Examiner Leary and later identified by Connolly's son, Raymond J. Connolly, of Jamaica Plain.

The fire caused damages estimated at $1600.

Connolly, whose political career was at times stormy, had the honor of serving as acting mayor of Boston for a period of six weeks. In addition to winning fame in politics, he had attracted great attention as a bicycle rider in the days of old.

Hero of many a political scrimmage, Connolly and his brother "Dan" once thrilled spectators at the old Charles River Park, Cambridge, when they raced each bicycliats as Jimmy Michael, Eddie McDuffee, Peta Berlo and Nat Butler. They rode under the colors of the Manhattan club of New York. "Tim" took part in a six-day bicycle race in New York and walked off with first prize.

Connolly was at one time president of the Tombhawk club of Roxbury and editor of its publication, the Tomahawk. His service as acting mayor came during Quincy's term.

Connolly's last important part in politics was in 1922 when he was counsel for the Democratic nomination for the Senate in the Fourth Suffolk district. He was anxious to wear the toga worn by Senator Thomas F. Donovan.

HARVARD TANK TESTS EFFECTS OF PRESSURES

The Harvard Medical School has a new $125,000 tank for the study of the physiological effects of high and low pressures. It is the first of its kind in the country.

The tank is the gift of J. H. Rand, Jr., '93, and was constructed at Akron, O., according to plans drawn by A. J. Van Woert of the Harvard Engineering School.

It is circular in shape, 35 feet long and eight in diameter, of half-inch welded steel, with two pressure chambers entered by means of a lock in the center, with doors in each through which supplies can be passed.

Pressure as high as 60 pounds per square inch and as low as those found at an altitude of 25,000 feet can be obtained, and gases of any desired mixture, humidity and temperature can be fed in any desired amount to the pressure chambers.

According to Dr. Philip Drinker of the school of public health, two kinds of research work will be undertaken by means of the apparatus. The first will be a study of the curative effects of high and low pressure in diseases such as pneumonia, heart disease and respiratory trouble. In the second case labor will be studied under specialized conditions, such as tunnel construction, caisson building, aviation flying and other trades where workers must endure abnormal atmospheric changes. Bicycles and rowing machines will be installed to measure the quantity of work a man can accomplish under varying conditions.

BANTON SAYS M'MANUS SLEW ROTHSTEIN

New York, Jan. 5 (AP)—District Attorney Banton believes George A. McManus fired the shot that killed Arnold Rothstein.

"You can tell the whole world that I believe McManus shot Rothstein," said Banton today. Commissioner Whalen had expressed a similar opinion.

Rothstein was shot in McManus' room in the Park Central Hotel. McManus is in jail. Police expect the early arrest or surrender of Hyman (Gilbert Rider, "payroll man" for McManus at the race tracks.

St. Augustine, Fla., Jan. 5 (AP)—Matthew Andrews, chairman of the board of the M. A. Hanna Co. of Cleveland, died here today.

HOOVER HOPES TO TOUR WEST INDIES

Aboard U. S. S. Utah, Jan. 5—President-elect Hoover was today planning to speed his conferences in Washington to allow for a cruise of the West Indies before his inauguration on March 4.

The President-elect will commence his conferences on his cabinet selections and other matters facing his administration in Washington Monday, and after concluding these he plans to go to Florida for a week or 10 days' rest.

Afterwards if time permits, he hopes to undertake the voyage to the West Indies, visiting Cuba, Haiti, Santo Domingo, Porto Rico and possibly the Virgin Islands. The West Indies tour probably would require less than three weeks and if undertaken, the President-elect would expect to return to Florida in ample time to write his inaugural address.

PLANS OF TRIP

Hoover particularly desires to visit Cuba. He also is anxious to get a first-hand observation of what the American marines are doing in Haiti and to ascertain how Santo Domingo has progressed since the termination of the American occupation several years ago.

He, also, wishes to visit Porto Rico as one of the most important American insular possessions.

Under the present plans for the trip, the President-elect would stop at Havana, Port-au-Prince, Santo Domingo City, San Juan and, if the Virgin Islands are included in the tour, at St. Thomas.

IN PORT TOMORROW

Although Hoover has received a number of invitations to visit Texas, he probably will be unable to accept these before his inauguration.

The Utah is between Bermuda and the coast of Georgia, approximately 350 miles from Hampton Roads. The prospects still were good for her arrival at Old Point Comfort at 8 a. m. Sunday.

Packing still is going forward apace, with passageways in main deck cluttered up with boxes and trunks belonging to members of the Hoover party. One hatchway was almost completely filled with boxes and crates containing gifts received by Mr. and Mrs. Hoover as they travelled through the Latin-American countries.

PAN-AMERICANS SIGN UP TODAY ON PEACE

Washington, Jan. 5 (INS)—The Pan-American conference on conciliation and arbitration will finish its labors late today and adjourn, satisfied that it has prevented a war between Bolivia and Paraguay, and leaving as a monument two treaties which it is hoped will prevent future wars on the American continent.

In the Hall of the Americans this afternoon, delegates from 20 nations, all members of the Pan American union, will affix their signatures to a treaty providing obligatory arbitration, and another for conciliation.

After four weeks of slow, painstaking work by sub-committees, final approval was given at a plenary session of the conference, with the actual signing postponed until today that the State Department could have properly engrossed treaties in four languages ready to be sealed and signed by the delegates.

Capt. Jensen, United Fruit Skipper, Dies

Capt. James Jensen, veteran United Fruit Co. steamship skipper, died at Savannah, Ga., Boston friends learned today. Capt. Jensen retired in 1926 after more than 50 years at sea. His last command was the S. S. Calamares, flagship of the great White Fleet. For a long time he was captain of the Admiral Sebley, running between Boston and Jamaica. He was 68 years old.

Holyoke, Jan. 5 (AP)—Oren D. Ainge, 72, founder and developer of the Oakdale district of this city and for 40 years active in civic and commercial life, died today.

TOXIN FLIERS SAFE, NEARLY FROZEN

Peace River, Alberta, Can., Jan. 5 (INS)—Almost frozen from the hard rides encountered in flying to Fort Vermillion with 200,000 units of anti-diphtheria toxin, Capt. "Wop" May and Vic Horner were enjoying a much needed rest today before returning to their home in Edmonton.

The intrepid aviators reported that the epidemic of diphtheria at the distant outpost in the Arctic wastes had been checked by the serum which they brought. One man had died from the disease and 200 others were threatened.

It had been feared the fliers had become lost in the northern part of the province, and a giant relief plane had been scheduled to start from Edmonton today to search for them. Plans plans were abandoned following the arrival of the aviators.

Before the anxious group of citizens who had been anxiously awaiting the arrival of the plane back from the unknown could reach the landing place, the provincial police car, driven by Constable Lowes, swept into town carrying the two almost frozen aviators.

The police officer was a cold man himself as he had stood guard on the river bank for two hours, and that is an eternity with the temperature 35 below. So stiff were the two fliers they had difficulty in removing their heavy togs. Their lips were chapped with the cold and their skin was blue with numbness, but they were in the best of spirits. From Ler, Vermillion the journey was made in exactly three hours.

"You can tell the world it was a cold trip," said May when he had stopped shivering, "we could have made the trip in faster time, but visibility was very bad. After the skies cleared we pegged straight ahead and I believe we must have gone about 30 miles further than was necessary."

2 Cafes Wrecked by Bombs in Chicago

Chicago, Jan. 5 (INS)—Two bombs both attributed by police to "racketeer" organizations, were touched off in Chicago today.

One blew the front out of a restaurant on North Crawford ave. and the other shattered the entrance of a newly-established grill on Lawndale ave. It is believed the owners had ignored examiners for some phase of the business.

Three Escape In New Bedford Fire

New Bedford, Jan. 5 (AP)—Fire of undetermined origin today caused damage of $15,000 to a building occupied by Joseph Protanti, automobile tire dealer. Several tons of new and second hand tires were destroyed. Mr. Protanti, his wife and child escaped from a tenement above the shop. There was no in-

FOUR SCALPERS AT GARDEN ARE FINED

Four "scalpers" of tickets to the championship Sonnberg-Lewis wrestling match at the Boston Garden, last night, were fined today in Municipal court, where more than 50 tickets, which were said to have been purchased at about 50 per cent over the established price, were shown in evidence by the police.

Those fined were Samuel Rosenberg, $25; John Ferrulo, $50; Walter Gleason, $50; and Louis Sorensky, $25.

Another charge against Willie Carmen was filed, while Max Smuler, which and Joseph Richards were placed on probation.

State police arrested Ferrulo, Gleason and Sorensky and they were taken before Judge Dodd. The other were arraigned before Judge Murray by Boston officers.

BEAUTY FROM "PAMPAS"

Mona Maris, shown by International Newsreel, won a place in Hollywood from Argentina by way of Berlin and school in England, a long way around, but now she is to appear in United Artists pictures, having been "discovered" in Germany by Joseph Schenk, guiding light of that studio. Her beauty is of the flashing southern type.

BOOTH TO RISK LIFE IN FIGHT FOR JOB

London, Jan. 5 (INS)—Bramwell Booth, supreme head of the Salvation Army, plans to prove his fitness to remain in command of the organization the Daily Express said today.

According to that newspaper, the aged general plans to leave his sick bed to which he has been confined for many weeks, and risk a four hour motor trip to Sunbury on the Thames so that he can lead his forces against the reform faction led by his sister, Evangeline Booth, head of the organization in America.

Those backing the general are confident that such a dramatic appearance before the high council which has been called to decide whether or not he shall continue as supreme head will sway a sufficient number of the reform factions to be able to keep him in power.

Ex-Comedy Star Is Going Under 'Radio Knife' Here

Catherine Bresskatone, former musical comedy star, was preparing today to be "rejuvenated" by a Boston plastic surgeon using a "radio knife," claimed to cut tissue bloodlessly and painlessly.

The surgeon, Dr. H. H. Bernstein, maintains that the electric scalpel is more efficient than any metallic instrument. A high voltage spark is the "blade," and this spark sears and sterilizes as it severs skin and flesh.

Said Dr. Bernstein today: "The radio knife, a German invention, serves its most useful purpose in dispelling the fear of blood and pain which usually accompanies an operation. It minimizes the danger of hemorrhage and infection and makes possible in one operation the permanent lifting of forehead, cheeks, angles of the mouth, and all sides of the neck."

MORE BRIGHT DAYS TO COME FOR NEW ENGLAND BUSINESS

Business Leaders See Busy Times in Months Ahead

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor

BUSINESS AND FINANCIAL LEADERS, the real experts on the outlook for 1929, are again generally agreed that we face another year of prosperity.

While the times of greatest "booms" never fail to see some lines lagging, the upward trend has never been more nearly complete than at the present time.

This lagging has always been due to special causes, in the past often either unrecognized or recognized too late. Modern methods of intensive research have changed the situation, and business and finance today are generally able to put a finger on the "sore spot." And when the trouble is known, the remedy can be applied.

Golden Year in the Background

Both in the United States and abroad 1928 has been indeed a "golden year." It has been a 12 months of notable progress in nearly all fields of industrial endeavor.

The flow of dividends, increased payments and "extras" has been stupendous, even beyond expectations of the most optimistic prophets who voiced their views a year ago.

Many industrials, rails, public utilities and coppers are already planning for considerable expansion in 1929.

During the past year the industrials, led by the mighty automotive industry, have in many instances excelled all previous achievements. The carriers have shown large earnings largely due to improved operating efficiency. Expected rail mergers have failed to be consummated, but there have been many large industrial mergers.

The public utilities have had another year for the most part of larger earnings, in part due to the rapid growth of these United States. With mounting prices for the red metal the coppers, for which Boston was the primary market in the days of early development, have again come into their own.

Stock exchange growth has been built on a sound basis of achievement by listed corporations, although prices in some instances have doubtless been overextended.

Building Hangs Up Fresh Records

The basic building industry has hung up new records, with contracts assuring big volume of employment for a long time to come.

Dealers' shelves are viewed as not overstocked, presaging good orders to keep factories busy in most important lines.

It has been the third year of large dividend disbursements. The men who order distribution of these profits, whether in dividends of stock or cash, are boards of directors, made up of business men in closest touch with fundamental conditions in their several lines.

Such men are not at all apt to make distributions if the situation calls for retrenchment or conservation. Their action is strictly governed by basic conditions. They are not apt generally to be wrong.

Improvement is everywhere considered world wide. That it continues outside of the United States is important, for foreign betterment helps our trade up and down the world's seas. And trade across the seas is always an important factor in maintaining and increasing prosperity at home.

Oil, coal and sugar are the lagging industries this year. The outlook for these is considered improved. Against the horizon of 1929 no menacing cloud is today visible.

As we remarked a year ago, if all the leaders, together with America's rank and file, bestir themselves with due spirit, our prosperity should indeed not only continue but also increase in noteworthy manner.

For the first time in years there is no great difference of opinion regarding the trade future among business and financial leaders. This is decidedly a far different situation than that of comparatively recent days, when American bankers began to assume the world leadership.

The beginning of 1929 finds sentiment not only more confident than it was a year ago, but fundamentals are considerably improved. Unemployment is at least reduced, generally good wage levels are maintained and commodity prices are at levels where profits are capable of being shown.

A tremendous construction program with expansion for many industries is being carried out. Crops have been good and efficiently moved, with farm buying power consequently improved. Wholesale and retail trade continue reasonably satisfactory, according to reports from major centers.

Domestic demand and the situation in other countries will have a good deal to do with governing the course of trade during the coming year. The automotive industry's confidence is considered by many as not likely to be misplaced. Automotive leaders probably keep in as close contact with the buying power as those of any single line of industrial endeavor.

If conditions continue to improve abroad, our foreign trade should show considerable gains. At the worst, it ought to be held closely to the levels of the "gold year" just ended.

Money Market Continues Puzzle

Some doubt exists regarding the future of the money market, but a good many authorities see no reason why money should be especially tight, at least until the spring demand for credit begins to be felt.

The bond market has not enjoyed during the past 12 months anything like the buying demand felt in the stock market. The reason is not far to seek. Investors have become imbued with the idea that good common stocks can be secured with at least as much safety of principal as is to be found in some bonds, and with the added lure of price appreciation.

At times during the advance in the stock market it was declared that the gains in many cases were not justified by business. Nevertheless business of a good many of the companies whose stocks soared skyward was found to furnish a good basis for at least some of the rise.

Contrary to the general rule at this season, production in numerous basic industries, notably the steel, is improving.

Striking evidence of the virility of the upward movement of business, continuation of which is expected, was given in the Christmas trade which reached the greatest volume in history.

Indications are that many of the foreign countries will have to seek financing in the American market. First class foreign bonds should find a ready market, but investors are looking with disfavor on doubtful securities.

Our own financing will take a large amount of money. Industrial notes and bonds falling due will furnish a broad field for new offerings.

30,000 U.S. Millionaires

Carl Snyder, of the Federal Reserve Bank, says there are between 30,000 and 40,000 millionaires, against 1000 in 1900 and 7000 in 1914. If average wealth of each millionaire is $3,000,000, that would mean $105,000,000,000. And that is rather a low estimate, as there are a few hundred financiers with fortunes ranging from $10,000,000 to $1,000,000,000. Also, a few hundred thousand people with fortunes ranging from $100,000 to $1,000,000. The big fortunes of a few look large, but are small in comparison with aggregate wealth of 115,000,000 people.

Wealthy men of ancient days would be poor in comparison with our rich men of today, and even in comparison with many of those who enjoy what we consider moderate means.

Even kings and queens of old, thanks to modern inventions, like the automobile, radio, etc., now in common use, enjoyed life but little as we enjoy it in these modern times.

The 1929 American home is better equipped with luxuries than the palaces of royalty in olden times.

Utilities' Growth for Year Maintained

Despite the rapid growth of public utilities in 1927, further new records have been hung up during the past year. The electric light and power industry in the United States during 1928 increased its monthly production about 10 per cent over 1927, according to the W. B. Foreshay Company in its weekly report on the public utility industry.

Between 6,500,000,000 and 7,000,000,000 kilowatt hours of electrical energy were produced monthly by the electric light and power plants of the United States during 1928, according to figures of the United States Geological Survey.

The average increase in output over the previous year was about 10 per cent, a remarkable showing because of the fact that industrial conditions, while generally good throughout the year, were spotty. Some industrially quiet sections used less electrical energy than during the preceding year.

Of the total energy generated an average of 1,525,000,000 kilowatt hours was used for lighting, about 3,600,000,000 kilowatt hours for power and the remainder was consumed for other general purposes. The figures do not include energy generated by electric railway companies, reclamation service or manufacturing plants.

During this year utility companies purchased an average of about 1,300,000,000 kilowatt hours monthly for resale purposes, as compared with a total of about 1,200,000,000 kilowatt hours monthly in 1927.

Energy used in intercompany business, including line losses in transmission, also reached a high monthly figure during the year with an average of about 1,175,000,000 kilowatt hours as compared with an average of about 1,080,000,000 kilowatt hours monthly in 1927.

LEADERS Prosperity Here REVIEW 1929 Cheer Seen OUTLOOK

Trade Outlook Excellent; Speculation Excites Fears Farm Foundations Sounder

By B. C. FORBES

THE 1929 outlook for business is distinctly more reassuring than the outlook for stocks.

Industrial foundations are sound; commercial foundations are sound, transportation foundations are sound; labor foundations are sound, mining foundations are sound; commodity price foundations are sound; agricultural foundations are sounder than they were; and political foundations are sound. Inflation is conspicuous by its absence.

It is entirely possible that 1929 will witness prosperity in business and employment, but not increasing "prosperity" in stock speculation. Quotations advanced in 1928 the equivalent of some twelve billions of dollars.

The present plan of the most powerful bull operators is to carry the Coolidge boom into the Hoover regime. Judging from the market's prompt and impressive recovery from the severe setback in early December, they may prove entirely capable of carrying out this program.

In face of monetary conditions it is not conceivable to this writer, however, that the market's upward pace can be furiously kept up throughout the year.

Interest rates have begun the year at the highest level since the 1920 collapse. The Federal Reserve System's ratio of reserve is at the lowest point touched since then. Brokers' loans are a billion and a quarter higher than a year ago and two and a quarter billions above two years ago.

The year just ended brought down our stock of gold from the Further exports would seem more logical than imports of gold. We already are carrying far more than our normal share of the world's supply of the metal.

Simultaneously with the 5 per cent to 12 per cent rates for day to day money and 7½ to 8½ per cent for Wall Street loans, commercial borrowing rates have been kept around 5½ per cent to 6 per cent, thanks largely to the attitude of the Federal Reserve Board and to the sensible course followed by responsible bankers. But it is unthinkable that any such disparity can be continued indefinitely. Either speculative rates will have to come down or commercial rates are bound to go up sooner or later.

By C. FORBES

Also, he shares the contention of conservative bankers that danger lurks in the presence in Wall Street of nearly $2,500,000,000 of demand loans furnished by non-banking lenders, lenders who presumably would not hesitate to call in their money should disturbances arise, and who presumably would have to recall a large part of their surplus funds should the business improvement generally predicted actually materialize.

The bulls admittedly are well supplied with optimistic arguments.

The year is counted upon to bring further improvement in business. Colossal mergers are being planned. The railroads confidently look for a favorable Supreme Court decision in the famous O'Fallon valuation test case. Railway shares have advanced extremely little, in contrast with the advances of 75 per cent to several hundred per cent in favorite industrial issues. Utility corporations promise to continue their solid and substantial progress. Inventories throughout the country are known to be low. The nation is earning more than ever before above its living expenses.

Labor's attitude is more intelligent and co-operative, and labor, thanks in part to multiplying labor-saving machinery, is distinctly more efficient than in the old days.

High Finance and Big Business are inspired by the prospect of Herbert Hoover's inaugurating as Chief Executive. They look for brilliantly successful cooperation from him in raising our prosperity to still greater heights.

Cutthroat competition is rapidly giving way in many industries to consolidating and to "understandings" which makes for the reduction or elimination of unprofitable practices.

Already at least some improvement has developed in farmland values. Agricultural debt has been reduced. Better farming methods and more diversifying are being adopted. The Government is earnestly seeking to provide all possible assistance to agriculture, and there is no reason to fear that prices our farm products will become less satisfactory than they have been.

In case of any unforeseen recession in business and employment, the Federal government, State governments and municipal governments doubtless would inaugurate very liberal construction programs.

Our foreign trade prospects are encouraging with nothing to indicate that a reviving Europe will succeed in driving us out of important foreign markets.

Then, our admirable way of living are steadily rising, inviting increased demand not only for better homes and better standards of all kinds but demands for a more generous supply of comforts and luxuries. Millions of thrifty people are supplied by the dividend and interest checks.

The nation never was more peaceably inclined and the world is making progress as never before toward the establishment of agreements and machinery for avoiding war.

The one danger spot, as the writer sees it, is Wall Street. If speculation should run still more rampant, restrictive legislation is certain to be attempted. Moreover, credit rotting would almost inevitably be invited.

Provided speculation is kept within bounds, the United States should enjoy in even increasing measure the prosperity which its intelligence, its resources, its enterprise, its industriousness, its wealth and its highly efficient workers have brought within its reach.

If we do not prosper, the fault will be our own.

CONTINENTAL MOTORS GAINS FOR YEAR

Earnings amounting to $2,079,457.23 for the fiscal year ended October 31, 1928, were shown in the annual statement of the Continental Motors Corporation just issued. This is an increase of $626,156.62 over the year previous, when the earnings were given as $1,444,339.61. With 1,760,845 shares of no par value stock outstanding, the earnings per share amount to $1.12 as against $.82 for 1927, an increase of 26 per cent over 1927 year.

Cash on hand is listed at $6,334,-881.85 in addition to United States Certificates of Indebtedness of $1,-000,000. The total current assets amount to $12,906,939.51 against current liabilities of $2,168,577.00, or a ratio of 6.4 to 1.

CASH POSITION UP

In a letter accompanying the statement to stockholders, B. W. Judson, president of the company said:

"The 1928 fiscal year, concluded October 31st, discloses on careful examination, satisfactory progress in practically all essential operations. Profits from operations exceeded by $626,000 those of the previous fiscal year, and the substantially increased business has been handled with a smaller inventory. This has been reflected in the cash position which shows an increase of $2,207,856.78 over the conclusion of the 1927 fiscal year.

"The increase in efficient operation of your company has been due to the rearrangement of the plant, the development of improved facilities and machinery of the highest type, together with an increasing volume of business from contracts with the largest producers in the industry. This has further attracted the attention of other substantial producers, resulting in a larger volume of business in hand and under negotiation.

AVIATION ENGINES

"One of the interesting developments of the year is the active entrance of your company in the field of aviation engines. Production at present is being made way with a capable and experienced engineering and producing organization, which is under the direction of Mr. Charles Insley, formerly assistant chief, Power Plant Division, U. S. Army, Air Corps, at Dayton, Ohio.

"The industrial motor division has increased in size, diversified and substantial way. This is partially the result of an increasing demand for the use of internal combustion motors in industrial work (for tractors, road building machinery, rail cars, trenching, ditching, excavating and hoisting machinery, portable air compressors, concrete mixer and conveyors, etc.) Your company has increased its proportion of business in this field very substantially during the past year, a number of the largest users of industrial motors in industrial work (for tractors, road building machinery, rail cars, trenching, ditching, excavating and hoisting machinery, portable air compressors, concrete mixer and conveyors, etc.) Your company has increased its proportion of business in this field very substantially during the past year, a number of the largest and most desirable accounts in the province of increase is estimated at 20 per cent."

Chicago Pneumatic Earnings Increase

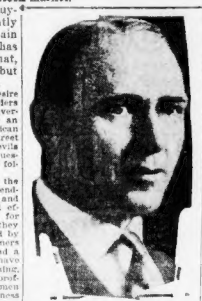
Chicago Pneumatic Tool Co. net after all charges and federal taxes was $1,270,009 for 1928 (December estimated), equivalent to $5.78 a share on convertible preference stock and $3.67 a share on common, the figures in 1927 were equivalent to $6.14 a share on preference stock.

November 30, 1928, balance sheet adjusted to give effect to proposed authorized recapitalization, shows current assets of $8,742,303, or about 8.8 times current liabilities of $977,-300, leaving indicated working capital of $7,765,004. After recapitalization capital structure will consist of $2,900,000 5½ per cent sinking fund debentures, 185,000 shares of no par convertible preference stock, and 199,469 shares no-par common.

1929 Outlook Good Declares Cutter

By VICTOR M. CUTTER
President of the United Fruit Company

THE business outlook for the coming year is good. Factors which may possibly be unfavorable are, from a long-term point of view, instalment buying; and from a temporary point of view, speculation in the stock market.



VICTOR M. CUTTER

As regards instalment buying, we have not sufficiently accurate data to be certain that instalment selling has been sound. It is probable that, by and large, it has been, but there is no certainty as yet.

Stock speculation and the desire on the part of some business leaders and of a vast multitude of our average citizens for easy money is an amazing example of our American exuberance. The man in the street will deliver a lecture on the evils of speculation whenever he is questioned, but at the same time he follows the crowd and speculates.

In our present gambling era, the sane business men who are attending to their jobs and producing and selling goods economically and efficiently, are laying the base for our permanent prosperity, and they have not to any degree profited by the present market. The newcomers in business, those who have had a few thousand dollars and have been willing to gamble everything, have at the present time reaped profits. Five years from now the men who are sticking to sound business will still be leaders; the others, forgotten.

If we are to maintain our prosperity, our business needs the undivided attention of every able man. However, the speculative wave will have only a temporary and comparatively slight effect for our fundamental position is sound, and our Federal Reserve System sufficiently flexible to safeguard stability.

The prospects are brighter than ever before for American business because, speaking from a business point of view, we have an internationally minded President-elect. There is no question but that the most efficient form of business organization is that of the large company or corporation which draws its supplies from many sources and distributes them equally to the greatest number of outlets all over the world.

The Department of Commerce is being flooded with requests for information on Latin American trade, inquiries being induced by the trip of the President-elect.

It is clear that if we seize our opportunities to develop world markets, we shall have established the broadest possible basis for permanent future prosperity.

Unlisted Securities to Enjoy Good 1929 Market

By CHARLES A. DAY
Of Charles A. Day & Co.

THE unlisted security market gave a definite added stimulus to general investment and speculative interest in 1928. In this the utilities, bank shares, insurance and several industrial stocks shared. Looking into 1929, the unlisted securities market would seem to offer added opportunities to the discriminating buyer for the employment of surplus funds. As a matter of course, in the unlisted market are many sound issues selling in the open counter, relatively speaking, for so small known as those in the listed market. For this reason they offer possibilities in price enhancement which are very attractive, not having yet discounted marketwise their full potentialities.

Supplementing this rather normal condition, and taking the public utilities as a class, the outlook is very promising. On March 4th next at Washington an administration will come into office which probably has the most conservatively broad and constructive outlook as to the proper relation between government and business of any national administration in a generation.

This portends a period when the prosperous development of public utilities should prove very satisfactory to those whose funds are already invested in that class of securities, and to those discriminating investors who can visualize what the future has in store for that industry. Despite the fact that there has been a rather substantial rise in the prices of some of the utilities over the past year, there are unquestionably others which have not yet discounted the favorable situation ahead for the public utility.

Supplementing the very favorable outlook that the public utilities are facing a period of reasonable assurance of immunity from petty governmental interference is the particularly healthy condition in which the industry finds itself at the present time. A recent and complete survey by one of the leading public engineering firms in the country shows there is still undeveloped 62 per cent of the power and lighting field. Of the total potential electrical consuming field in the United States, both domestic and commercial, it is estimated that 80 per cent of the former and 44 per cent of the latter remain undeveloped at present.

Room for future development in the various fields is estimated as follows: Residential lighting, 33 per cent; home appliances, 70 per cent; ranges, 97 per cent; water heaters, 98 per cent; street railways, 20 per cent; industrial power, 40 per cent; street lighting, 55 per cent. In developing the use of electricity in the home, engineers estimate that the average home should use at least 4,800 kw. h. annually if it is completely electrified. Such a 100 per cent possible consumption is more than 11 times the present consumption of the average home.

Insurance stocks as a class have shown a substantial price increase over the past year. However, with the normal growth in the insurance business and the increasing "insurance sense" of the general public there is reasonable assurance that the past prosperous conditions in this business will continue.

It follows as matter of course that the discriminating purchaser of insurance stocks is pretty certain to share in this indicated future prosperity.

With the increased investment interest in bank notes, as evidenced by the formation of investment trusts investing liberally in such securities, these stocks also offer attractive possibilities. Here again, however, proper discrimination should be used in purchases. The distinct facts affecting bank stocks which have occurred over the past few months are worthy of mention.

One is the final tendency of Boston banks to reach out into metropolitan Boston and the suburban field and exert a controlling interest in the smaller banks and trust companies. The other is the tendency of several of the large banks in New York, Philadelphia and other cities to split up their shares to certificates of smaller par value.

Just what the net effect of these two phases of bank financing will be is problematical. On the surface, at least, neither would seem to be an adverse development in the purchase of the right bank shares, in making up one's general investment list.

The consensus of investment and speculative opinion seems to favor a continuance of satisfactory conditions generally for 1929. If this be borne out, it should have a specific application to the unlisted market in emphasizing the probability that the normal situation, where particular opportunities exist in the unlisted market, where securities have not yet fully discounted their price potentialities in 1929, favors the outlook for increased opportunities in this "over the counter" market.

PRICES CUT BY INT. SHOE

International Shoe Co. of St. Louis has announced another reduction in price of shoes, averaging about 4 per cent, or 5 to 15 cents per pair, depending upon grade. This is the second reducing within three months, the first having been made in October, averaging 6 per cent, or 5 to 25 cents per pair.

The first reduction occasioned some surprise in the trade and was a factor in causing further recessions in the hide and leather market, which was beginning to show weakness. It was promptly followed by other large manufacturers. The second reduction has caused a new stir in the trade and serves to intensify the sharp competitive conditions among producers.

Cities Service Co. has purchased plants, business and real estate of Republic Oil Co. of Washington, D. C., and has taken over operation of the Republic properties in Washington and Virginia.

Standardization Effects Savings

IMPORTANT technical developments in the manufacturing and mining industries and the public utilities of the United States have resulted during the past year from the development of numerous national industrial standards for materials, processes and products, according to a report by P. G. Agnew, secretary of the American Standards Association. Saving of many millions of dollars and great improvements of value both to producers and the public are among the beneficial results of the standardization movement.

Civil engineering, building construction, the mechanical industries, the electrical industries, coal, iron and other mining and the petroleum industry are among those for which national standards were completed during 1928.

CHECK TO GAMBLING IS SEEN

By HAROLD B. LAMONT
Vice-President of C. D. Parker & Co.

The year 1928 showed at least two surprising factors, marketwise. One was the inordinate speculation at what appeared to be unconscionably high prices for low dividend-paying securities or non-dividend-paying securities. The other was the high rates commanded by money.

High money rates appear to us to have existed to check wild speculation.

For many years the stock market has governed itself to the estimates of values of securities by known facts. Although the basis may not necessarily be known to operate, the facts on which its estimates of values of securities have heretofore been based were known to someone. During 1928 the stock market on a considerable portion of it has developed the habit of basing its estimates of the values of securities on rumors.

Eventually, I believe that there will be a return to the accustomed ways of estimating the security values. I believe there is plenty of money in this country to finance its business and finance our portion of foreign business without causing high interest rates. I believe that investors in this country have grown in number to such an extent that five and six millionaires days on the New York Stock Exchange will be a common thing.

I believe that there will be a good general business and not much unemployment in 1929.

Whether the host of new investors and market operators will learn to judge securities on their economic merits and known facts before the close of 1929, remains to be seen.

One of the big developments of 1928 has been the enormous amount of funds that have been available to investment corporations and investment trusts. I believe organizations of this kind have come to stay and as time goes by, many investors will consider the purchase of this class of investment, properly managed, a sound method of saving money and that securities of these organizations will be bought not only for cash but on some savings plan. At present it seems as though the trend toward investment trusts or corporations is developing rather rapidly but this country has been so far behind Europe for so many years in this respect that it must go a long way to catch up.

CHEERFUL ON TRADE FOR 1929

The national outlook of the W. L. Douglas Shoe Company, with its 124 branch stores forming a network over the entire country, peculiarly qualifies Herbert L. Tinkham, its president, to speak with authority on the business outlook for the coming year. Optimism, warm and unalloyed, is the keynote of an interview given by Mr. Tinkham to the Boston Evening American.

Mr. Tinkham's opinion is clearly not merely an encouraging gesture, to fill Brockton homes with cheer and exhilaration, as Longfellow's did in 1929. His conclusions regarding conditions here and throughout the nation are based on a careful survey of business trends in 1928, and on the results of the year, which for big business, is the great majority of which can be listed

HIGH WAGE SCALES

"Very thoughtful business men, watchful of the trend of 1928," said Mr. Tinkham, "must foresee for the next year something better, even, than a continuation of the old year prosperity.

"A recent statement of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, which I have here now on my desk, points out that the evidence of a big business year now dawning is not found in the mere fact of great industrial activity."

He points significantly to the contention throughout 1928 of the high wage scales and widely distributed incomes of the last few years, balanced by ready movements of goods into the hands of consumers. He finds everywhere, in reports from various industries through the year, conclusive evidence of a high and advancing level of activity.

"As President Sargent, of the Chicago & North Western speaks with equal confidence and assurance of the unprecedented prosperity in the United States in 1929."

So the W. L. Douglas Shoe Co.'s Mr. Tinkham continued, has enjoyed its share of 1928 prosperity. We can look back on the splendid record of increased sales, amounting to 1,258 pairs of shoes sold in 1928 than in the preceding year.

BIG BUSINESS AHEAD

"We can look ahead with equal assurance. Already, we have over 50,000 pairs of shoes waiting to be made for the coming spring season. Yet, all this is but a small part of evidence of the healthful trade conditions prevailing throughout the country.

"The W. L. Douglas Shoe Co.'s prosperity is based on the three fundamentals to any success on a national scale: Centralization of effort, great purchasing power, and a product that has honest quality and sells for a fair price.

"Centralization of effort simply means the reduction of overhead to a minimum, because we make so many shoes under one roof in our large Brockton factories.

"Because of our 124 stores, the recent combinations of large department stores all over the country simply parallel the effort to secure greater buying power. We have this buying power, which enables us to offer all our merchandise and products for cash at the lowest possible prices.

WANTS SMART DRESS

"The world well knows the basic policy upon which we have long founded this industry, back there in 1876. We have always maintained that policy. It means not only that we make solid leather shoes, but it means, as well, that we stamp on the soles of every shoe we actually make, during manufacture, a square price mark. That price is the public's guarantee of honest

BUCKLAND SEES N. H. GAINING

Vice-President H. G. Buckland, of the New Haven Railroad, in a review presented especially for the Boston Evening American, declares that the New England carrier is in an improving position in all lines.

"During the year 1928 the volume of traffic has been somewhat less than in 1927, but there has been an improvement in operating efficiency and reduction in expenses, the net income with the reasonable rate increases granted from recent months and from 1929 should not vary materially from the present year.

"Attention is called to the serious situation confronting the railroads. Congress in its message and action is having the effect upon the growth of freight traffic that a large increase in the cost of electric power in industry would have. Largely reduced production of coal traffic directly and indirectly affects the railroads.

* * *

"Because of the remarkable progress made in the art of welding, operating costs have been reduced and the railroads generally prevails of the effort to secure greater buying power. We have this buying power, which enables us to offer all our merchandise and products for cash at the lowest possible prices.

WANTS SMART DRESS

"The world well knows the basic policy upon which we have long founded this industry, back there in 1876. We have always maintained that policy. It means not only that we make solid leather shoes, but it means, as well, that we stamp on the soles of every shoe we actually make, during manufacture, a square price mark. That price is the public's guarantee of honest

Then comes the important consideration of style.

Hannauer Expects B. & M. Will Increase Business

By PRES. GEORGE HANNAUER, Boston & Maine Railroad

THE Boston & Maine Railroad looks to 1929 as a year of increased freight traffic to and from New England.

New England, and those sections of the country which supply our natural markets for consumer products fabricated from them in New England's 20,000 industrial plants, have given the Boston & Maine Railroad in 1928 a volume of freight business larger than in 1927.

The increase was slightly in the first six months, this traffic increase appreciably in the last half of the year, and in October was next to the greatest in our history.

We have endeavored to deserve this and other additional business by improvements in service which have shown by 1 to 4 days the time of shipments from New England to other sections.

In passenger revenues, notwithstanding many improvements in our passenger trains, the decline of the first nine months was 3 per reduction of 8 per cent compared with 1927, much the same proportion as our freight traffic generally.

"As compared with 1927 this decline in revenues is almost $7,-000,000, or 29 per cent.

There is indication of a continued increase in the number of persons who are leaving the automobile, but the tendency to ride in trains is increasing because principal points on our lines has not public transportation facilities such as are to be found in many other cities.

"Nothing is currently accomplished toward modernizing our railroad plant and equipment, much yet remains to be done. Plans for the enlargement of the Boston and Maine it will be a year requiring outlays of considerable magnitude, both for additions and of even heavier expenditures for the purpose of further improvement of the property to accommodate the objectives of providing for the service of New England and for the efficient operation of the railroad as communities will extend coöperation to this end so give to the railroad all the traffic which they can, and by withholding governmental action which will add contributions to local property with the rehabilitation of the railroad in the public interest.

The construction of enlarged and up-to-date classification yards in Boston and Mechanicville has been completed. A new North Station has been opened, three sections of road way have been rock-ballasted, passing tracks have been extended and bridges strengthened and clearances increased, and new locomotives added.

With ample capacity this assured to care for much larger volume of both freight and passenger business, we shall direct our efforts and expenditures in 1929 to improving the quality of our service, to producing greater operating efficiency, and to getting more business.

"Machine" Voting Is Used Today in a Dozen States

OFFERING of "machine" voting to communities in the stock market business on light volume of trade, automatic registering of votes by machine is now effective in twelve states—California, Oregon, Washington, Wisconsin, Iowa, Maryland, Michigan, Indiana, Arizona, Montana, Connecticut and New York, in addition to Pennsylvania, and Tennessee are considering necessary legislation to make use of the system. The use of voting machines, while Oklahoma, North Carolina, Florida, Kentucky, Illinois and New Jersey have this matter under consideration.

Rather general dissatisfaction with the handling of the ballot in these other states is expected to influence the increasing use of the voting machine in the forthcoming short session of congress.

Delays in getting the final election returns after voting, with the large expense involved, plus the discrepancies in recording votes by the old methods, necessitating expensive recounts, are opportunities that are taken out, not in imitation, all emphasize the merit of a machine which in its recording is infallible.

The infallibility of the recording machine has already been demonstrated in a considerable number of cases through use of the adding machines and various counting machines with which the system is identified. In the textile, automobile and other industries, where production records of a large volume of small parts must be kept, would have been impossible of development and of their present efficiency and speed.

Superficially it might seem that any machine were incapable of adaptation for satisfactory recording of the movement of votes in voting. That such an incapacity is only seeming is well illustrated by the performance and development of the Robot, a machine which does practically everything but think.

The Robot machine has been developed nearly to that degree of efficiency itself. It provides an accuracy and secrecy which prevents any knowledge by other than the voter, particularly since the ballot has been cast, his vote losing its identity completely as soon as the voting lever has transferred its respective counters which are subject to inspection during the process of voting.

The count made with mechanical accuracy as the votes are cast eliminates the human element in the count that enters into the counting of paper ballots. All this is done with a speed which is controlled only by the capacity of the voter to register his choice. Even with a novice in control, the machine will handle a number of ballots in the closing of the polls. All this is done from the comparatively simple assembly of the machine, the experience of the machines having shown an average of 16 seconds per voter for printed ballots against 16 cents per vote for machine voting, even in thoroughly representative territories.

The ballot recording machine practically assures honesty in election returns. No stuffing of ballot boxes is possible, the machine having a series of locked boxes, provided with separate keys; no change in the setting of the counters is possible because before this can be done another lock must be opened, the key for which is held by the central board of elections, the counters previously having been set back at zero in the presence of representatives of different parties.

Yet, despite the ability of the machine to prevent fraud, it still has a flexibility which has proven equal any 4.

to any election task yet posed upon it. A straight party vote may be cast by moving a single lever, or a process all the individual levers are is equivalent to marking a cross on the ballot for an entire party.

The ticket may be split down to individual choice, for a vote for any candidate for a certain office automatically locks out any other votes for any candidate for that office, while the voter finding it impossible to vote for more candidates than as many times as there are offices to be filled.

When the position remains two individuals to be voted for, a voter may cast but two votes, and the two nuts who are candidates for that office, regardless of party affiliation, and the locking of the two candidates automatically locks all other levers casting votes for that position.

When the same candidate is indorsed for a certain office by two or more parties, the machine can be arranged so that only one vote can be registered, regardless of whether they occur because of his inclusion on one party or another, will all total on the same counter, and no duplication is possible. The machine can also be adjusted to meet the needs of any special primary contest. The voting machine contains from 24 to 40 or more parts, depending on its size, and like all of the similar machinery which has come into use, is highly interesting and even fascinating in its performance. It is expected to provide the up-to-date efficiency and satisfaction in handling the voting at elections which will place them in step with the progress which has been made in practically all other phases of business, industry and social existence.

Sanford Mills Shows Prosperity

For a concern engaged in manufacturing textile fabrics, Sanford Mills, one of the most prosperous mills in New England, had satisfactory results in the year ended November 30, 1928, with indicated profits of $1,247,849, equal to $4.88 per share on 250,072 shares outstanding. These earnings were smaller, however, than those of around $1,500,000 in the two preceding years, and $2,000,000 in 1925. That Sanford Mills can keep up a good rate of earnings when most other mills are finding it difficult to break even, is due to its affiliation with the automobile trade.

Pan-American's Earnings Lower

Pan American Western Petroleum reports for quarter ended September 30 net profit of $87,852, after depletion, depletion interest, taxes, etc., against $272,942 in the same quarter of 1927. For nine months ended September 30, net profit was $58,822 after the above deductions, against $437,756 in the first nine months of 1927.

American Cynamid Increase O. K.'d

American Cynamid Co. stockholders at Portland approved increase in common B stock to 700,000 shares from 300,000; also proposed offer of additional class B common to common stockholders at $20 a share in ratio of one B share for each two shares of common of record January 10. Rights expire February 4.

VICTOR-RADIO MERGER IS APPROVED

Directors of the Radio Corporation of America and Victor Talking Machine Company approved a plan of unification of the two companies and subsidiary and associate companies throughout the world.

Directors of the Radio Corporation voted to issue 6,500,000 shares of new stock of which 5,777,000 shares will be exchanged for the present outstanding Radio common stock at the rate of five new shares for each share.

They also voted the issuance of $12,000 shares of cumulative 5 per cent. preferred stock, junior to the 18,780,000 of outstanding 7 per cent preferred stock.

The Radio Corporation will give Victor stockholders one share of the new radio common stock and one share of the 5 per cent preferred stock for each share of Victor Talking Machine stock now held. The plan includes the future distribution of $5 a share to Victor common stockholders.

The outstanding $19,581,000 of 7 per cent preference stock of the Victor Company will be retired at the completion at $115 a share. The last quarterly dividend on this preferred stock, which has not already been exchanged for common stock, will be paid at the rate of $10 a share.

The Radio preferred is a $5 no par stock, callable at $100 a share.

BOND ELECTION RESULTS ARE REVEALED

The voting of $23,511,873 new issues during the month of December brings the total for the year 1928 and municipal borrowing authorizations for the calendar year 1928 to the record figure of $283,412,000.

December authorizations by the following cities and towns in 23 states aggregated $23,744,473, according to the Daily Bond Buyer of New York.

The figure for December, 1927, was $18,576,250, and for December, 1926, $41,830,224. The reduced figure this year is explained by the huge total of $64,000,000 previously submitted to voters at the November general election. Authorizations for 1926 totaled $347,853,415. Among the larger issues approved in December are Bronx, N. Y., $7,500,000; Brownsville Navigation Dist., Tex., $2,500,000; Melbourne, Fla., $1,250,000, and Racine, Wis., $1,220,000.

The total of issues defeated last month is $17,765,700, when returns and proposals presented by 58 municipalities in 17 states. The total for the same period last year was $24,746,500, as compared with $13,-925,000 in 1926. A few of the larger issues defeated were: Angelina Co., Tex., $1,400,000; Dudley Co., Ga., $1,000,000; Lubbock Co., Tex., $2,085,-000; Kingfisher Co., Okla., $350,000.

Bond issues approved by voters during the entire year totaled $356,-830,019, as compared with $211,-264,500 in 1927 and $179,745,259 in 1926.

The following table, compiled by the Daily Bond Buyer, presents a list of bonds approved for the months for the past three years:

Good Copper Year Seen by Kelley

Cornelius F. Kelley, president of Anaconda, says 1929 will be favorable for industrial copper. "The trend of business is favorable," he states, "and copper is used in many industries, including electric machinery, communications, power and light, and in building. New industries are developing new uses as radio, electric refrigeration, and washing machines. Copper has gone through period of over-production; stocks of metal have been reduced to a minimum and sales for future delivery are in excess of supply above ground."

what it was this time last year. I believe we will have a continuance of good times and prosperity will be even more in evidence during the coming year. I know these facts from my close contact with many industries throughout New England. The textile industry is doing much better than they have been for several years. There is an upward trend which is bound to continue. Shoe production has been converted, the shoe trade shows a very marked improvement and the industrial lines in hardware, lumber and other manufacturing are coöperating very much encouraged.

The banking interests in New England have never been in better shape than at present, the amount of deposits held in savings banks and checking accounts show in the last annual National Bank a gradual and substantial increase. We are feeling the tide of prosperity."

17-CT. COPPER POSSIBILITY IS CITED

The prospect of 17-cent copper is generating a good measure of confidence in this 1929 outlook for copper mining companies. Not since March, 1923, has the price been a this level. Almost six years ago to price of the red metal reached 17¾@17¾ cents per pound. The situation today is quite different from that existing in 1923. The industry as a whole is better organized, and it has had the benefit of valuable experience, says the Boston News Bureau.

It was only a few months ago that producers were jubilant at a price of 15 cents, and expected their every influence to supply the demand so that further price advances would not take place. This attitude was based on keeping the industry on a sound basis, putting aside the selfish view of large earnings from higher metal prices. Experience had proved that rapid price advances had almost generally resulted in sharp declines, leaving the industry in a weak condition.

The sustained record-breaking demand for copper, principally by domestic consumers, has greatly exceeded the fondest expectations of producers. There is a good deal of much somewhat reluctant to see the price of copper advance to 18¢, because of the profound effect this would have on the future. There have been several in advising that genuine demand and not that in the past 'buying has been the reason.

Domestic consumption, finished copper from North and South American primaries totaled 1,577,-742,000 pounds in the first seven months of 1928, against 1,649,685,-000 pounds in the entire 12 months of 1927. Export shipments, on the other hand, were lower in the first 11 months of 1928 than in the full year 1927, at 1,249,926,000 against 1,243,730,000 pounds. The market increase in domestic shipments during 1928 indicates the potentialities of a duplication in export shipments. Supplies of refined copper abroad are very small and are in need of replenishment from new sources.

Helmsley it by no means certain that the demand for the red metal that has been so large in the past will be in the future. The latest quarterly advance has been brought about by an increased demand from certain sources. Optimistic foreign buyers have come into the market and fill their requirements and abandon hope of a drop to 14¢.

The facts show quite conclusively that the copper industry after seven years of depression is at last functioning on a normal basis—with good prospects of its continuation.

Manhattan Shirt Sales Set Peak

Manhattan Shirt Co. reports for year ended November 30, 1928, net profit of $1,625,429 after all federal taxes, equivalent after 7 per cent preferred dividends to $3.32 a share on 450,000 shares of common, against $1,337,429 or $4.56 a share in preceding year. December sales were the largest of any month in the company's history, and exceeded the same month of the previous year by 40 per cent. Corresponding month of preceding year by December shows the largest dollar and percentage increase for any month this year. Sales of January were the largest for any year in the company's history, being the first time they exceeded $2,500,000.

Oil Industry Is Sound, Says Cutten

Arthur W. Cutten sees petroleum industry on the eighth level, he says corporation will eliminate inefficient and weak units. Refining has made rapid progress in removing element of chance from location of wells, and in reduction in losses in products, in percentage of available oil recovered in reservoirs, and cost of distribution. With explosion of myth of "saturation point" in motor fuel, petroleum sees field of fuel and lubrication for automobile, boat, tractor, aircraft, and railroad engine, with gasoline-electric locomotive and in growing use of oil for heating.

Other Slight Similarities

It seems that the Great American Wisecrack has its counterpart in polite English dialogue. In "The Whispering Gallery," at the Copley, Mr. Clive avers: "Rocky crags? Why, I'm as sure-footed as a beastly goat." "Well," remarks another, "perhaps that's not the only point of resemblance."

STAGE AND SCREEN

Definition of a Gentleman

In "The Royal Family," at the Wilbur, the venerable Fanny Cavendish (played by Haidee Wright) recalls the graces of a son-in-law, deceased: "Rex Talbot was a brilliant young butler. And he had the most beautiful manners. He was the kind of man who could kiss your hand without looking silly."

HOLIDAYS OVER, DRAMA SETTLES DOWN TO ITS ANNUAL SEASONAL ENDURANCE TEST

THE HAT TRICK is an old one, but it always goes over. The hat check girl is June O'Dea and the ballroom boy is Carl Francis and, if you must know, the show is George Cohan's "Billie," newcomer to the Colonial.

MARGALO GILLMORE has her difficulties with the first traveling salesman in history who was immune from the charms of a pretty face. That IS news! "Marco Millions," Hollis.

"WON'T YOU—SIT DOWN?" is a trite phrase of the theater, but the bench was comfortable and the photographer amiable, so Frances De Foe, of "Rain or Shine," would be obliging. (Shubert).

LUCILLE NIKOLAS, so easy on the vision, will tell us just what "The Big Pond" is all about at the St. James next week. This is Miss Nikolas' first visit to Boston. Now, then!

FIRST AID! Never let it be said that Sam Pepys heard a cry for help and did not fly to assist. Never did he adjust Beauty to diagnosis for lack of gentle benefits. Walter Kingsford and Roberta Beatty in "And So To Bed," Plymouth.

VALOR IN THEATER AN UNSUNG VIRTUE

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

THE red badge of courage is not always pinned upon the sleeve for the adoring gaze of the multitude. Neither is it the exclusive property of the brave boys who storm trenches and perform other deeds of astonishing valor. Multilateral peace pacts may still the roar of cannon, but the call for human mettle still raises a ringing voice. Within the past few weeks, in the theaters of this town, genuine heroism has soared far above the clattering dollars at box office counters. We have built up our own list of candidates for Distinguished Service honors: Ethel Barrymore, lately at the Wilbur in "The Kingdom of God," and Herman Rosenberg and Joe Cook, more recently at the Shubert with "Rain or Shine."

* * *

IF the busy actor enjoys special compensations, such as pleasant work and turkeycent pay envelope, he also is endowed with woes peculiarly his own. We bestow our sympathy, wholeheartedly, upon the player who is compelled to trudge through his scenes when physically unfit. That is a torture almost rivalling the spirited discomforts arranged by those relentless old boys of the Inquisition. Making merry for eager customers while the body aches and the head is awhirl carries its own miseries; its demand upon the player is courage, grit and still more courage. In this respect the actor undoubtedly ranks as the bravest soldier employed by the commercialized arts.

WHENEVER it happens that a stricken actor is the star of an organization, the germ that picks him out for individual attention generally does business on a large scale. It becomes a slaughter of the innocents. When Joe Cook, who fought for days against the inevitable, was finally forced by his physician's order to suspend performances of "Rain or Shine," financial losses far beyond the sick man's loss of salary took definite shape. Members of the company swallowed their bitter medicine, for idle principals and chorus people draw no compensation. Also, Messrs. Morris and Green, producers of the piece, and the Shubert Theater faced non-productive days with an annoying overhead carrying on, as usual.

BUT Joe Cook did not surrender until driven to the wall by racking illness. He stuck to the job to the last despairing minute; only his physician could drive him into pajamas and a warm bed. That was the actor of it; no surrender while voice and legs functioned. There are assurances now that Mr. Cook will be his own comic self again on Monday night, the flu, laryngitis and what not having picked too sturdy an actor to be kept out of his cast for more than three days.

* * *

ETHEL BARRYMORE, during her recent visit, came face to face with the same demand for courage. For a week her performances, which gave pleasure to thousands, rewarded her with torturing agony. But she fought on until strength and vitality collapsed. She, too, was heroine to an art that demands the last ounce of its disciple's power. Morris Rosenberg, musical conductor with "Rain or Shine," died in the harness. He directed his company through the Saturday night performances. Monday morning he was just a memory to those who loved him. Yes, indeed, there is heroism in the theater—plenty of it.

Oh, Suzanna!

EDITH MASON, as Suzanne in "The Marriage of Figaro," appears here again with the Chicago Civic Opera on January 28.

PHIL STARTS AS AMATEUR

Phil Baker, Keith Memorial headliner next week and partner of Ben Bernie in the production of "Cafe de Dance" at the Majestic, is 29 years old and has been on the stage in one way or another since he was 14. At an early age he showed musical proclivities, and because piano playing cost too much a piano recording was provided by the Bakers for their prodigy. Baker's first job was as office boy to Carl Laemmle in the old Imp Film Co., when Mary and Lottie Pickford and King Baggott were the big stars. His salary at the time was $6 a week, but Mary Pickford was working for the same company for $75 a week, and so he really wasn't doing so badly.

Phil Baker

His first step was right here in Boston, where he arrived with no money, no job, and no prospect of getting higher. Good fortune, however, lurked around the corner. Near his lodging house was a small theater addicted to the practice of "amateur nights."

Featured in the cast is Polly Walker; other players are Robinson Newbold, Carl Francis, Val and Ernie Stanton, Joseph Wagstaff, Ina Hay ward, Marjorie Lane, June O'Dea and Ethel Allen. Staged by Edward Royce and Sam Forrest. Produced by George M. Cohan.

ST. JAMES—(Stock) "The Big Pond," a comedy by George Middleton and A. E. Thomas. The romance of an American heiress and an impecunious French nobleman. In the cast are Lucile Nikolas, who arrives as guest player for the week; also John Warner, George R. Taylor and others. Settings by Ernest Rand; staged by John McKee.

Young Broadway Actress Appears at St. James

Lucile Nikolas, young Broadway actress, is making her first Boston appearance in "The Big Pond," by George Middleton-A. E. Thomas comedy, at the St. James next week. Miss Nikolas began her first theatrical work as countless others have, in high school plays, in which she achieved notable success and plenty of encouragement, enough, in fact, to make her decide that she should make the stage her career.

She was fortunate in becoming associated with the Stuart Walker companies in the Middle West and of several seasons played in Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Dayton in a wide variety of roles. Among her Broadway plays are "Three Live Ghosts," "The Boston Track" and "Across the Street."

Perpetual Motion Ought to Go Well With Cohan

That pretty note of a tuba who is programed as June O'Dea in George M. Cohan's new musical play, "Billie," coming to the Colonial on January 7, swaps her trombone cases to be—for reigns here say. But June rises to refute this slur. "Just because I lock my toes against the back board of my bed doesn't mean I plop with my elbows on," she asserts. "Perhaps I am practicing a new style of dance thing. Who knows?" I am a young girl, with new ideas, as you see. There is positive proof that Miss O'Dea is constantly doing new things all over the place. She dances down the steps from her dressing room to the stage, she kicks and swings on her way to the theater and she does not abandon. In fact, she never stops hoofing. But then, she is only 18 and she is ambitious.

HEIFETZ CONCERT

Jascha Heifetz will give a recital in Symphony Hall on Sunday, January 13.

'TIS SPRING, TRA-LA-LA!

FANNIE BRICE twitters of vernal delights and is pretty gosh darn funny about it in her new combination—et—combination singing and talking film, "My Man," at the Washington Street Olympia and Fenway.

Passing Fair

LOIS MORAN, in professional parlance, will survey the hero this way in "Blindfold," her newest filmplay at the Scollay.

GALLIC STAR IN "LILACS"

Odette Myrtil, who impersonates the famous feminiluist George Sand in "White Lilacs," scheduled at the Majestic for Monday evening, has, in uniquely endowed by birth, a distinguished personage, having been born in Paris of stage parents. It was with the baby Odette, traveled all over Europe giving musical entertainments of distinctive variety and merit.

At the age of seven, Odette was wooed by a convent in Brussels, where she received the rudiments of her education during her day three precocious artistic and melodic temperament developed so perceptibly as to arrest the attention of Eugene Ysaye, the Belgian maestro, who frequently called the convent to entertain the inmates.

Odette disclosed such excellent technique as a pianist and soloist that Ysaye became her teacher in the music she acknowledged her perfection as a violinist.

CIVIC OPERA TO REVISIT THE HUB

One of the most brilliant nights of opera ever given in Boston is promised by the Chicago Civic Opera Company, January 23 to February 9.

Among the artists now in Boston are Mme. Maria Olszewska, the notable singing actress of the State Opera in Vienna, and Mme. Frieda Leider of the State Opera in Berlin. Mme. Olszewska will be seen and heard in Boston as Ortrud in "Lohengrin," one of her masterpieces, as Carmen, as Fricka in "Die Walkure" and as Octavian in "Der Rosenkavalier." Mme. Leider will take Brunnhilde in "Die Walkure" and the princess in "Der Rosenkavalier." Another newcomer is Mme. Eva Turner, English by birth, Italian by residence. She will be heard as Sieglinde in "Die Walkure" and as the countess in "Figaro." Miss Marion Claire, an American light soprano, German trained, is also new to Boston and will be heard as Elsa in "Lohengrin." Desdemona in "Otello" and Cherubino in "Figaro." The repertory follows:

First Week — Monday night, "Lohengrin"; Tuesday night, "Don Pasquale" and "Judith"; Wednesday matinee, "La Boheme"; Wednesday night, "Aida"; Thursday night, "Die Walkure"; Friday night, "Lakme"; Saturday matinee, "Boris Godunoff"; Saturday night, "Thais."

Second Week — Monday night, "Marriage of Figaro"; Tuesday night, "Carmen"; Wednesday matinee, "Orfeus et Meifriede"; Wednesday night, "Queen Tenea"; Thursday night, "Der Rosenkavalier"; Friday night, "The Love of Three Kings"; Saturday matinee, "Madame Butterfly"; Saturday night, "Otello."

COOK BACK MONDAY

Reports from the hospital agree that Joe Cook, star of "Rain or Shine," has been under treatment for laryngitis, states that the doctor is steadily improving, and does not doubt but that he will be able to return to the theater on Monday night. Our pet aunt of Mr. Cook's illness the Shubert has been dark for three days.

JANNINGS IN FINE FILM AT "MET"

It seems that the only thing they have to do now in Hollywood to hurt Emil Jannings' new film was to print the title of "Sins of the Fathers."

Get rid of that and you have a fine film, typically Jannings and a great deal similar to "The Way of All Flesh," or something really good in criminals.

At the Metropolitan now is shimmering on the screen with every detail of it fashioned by masters of the craft, Ludwig Berger, great directing director, is responsible. Under his guidance the camera works wonders and all the supporting players are keyed to the general excellence of the production.

They are Ruth Chatterton, discriminating actress; Zasu Pitts, who has always been among the finest film players; Barry Norton, a most promising young boy, and Jack Luden and Jean Arthur, a youthful pair who seldom get the chance to be so well coached.

Jannings is a waiter, at first stolid and contented, later a coarse and wealthy hooligan, and last back again to his lowly state of service. As in "The Way of All Flesh," a very big and artistic film.

FLONZALEY CONCERT

The Flonzaley Quartet will give the second concert of its farewell season at Jordan Hall next Wednesday evening, January 9. The program consists of Haydn's Quartet in D major, Hindle's Sonata for two violins and viola, and Beethoven's Quartet in E flat major.

HOW TO CONCENTRATE

WHERE THE WOODBINE TWINETH, and the moon mooneth, there you will find the beginning of romance and the makings of divorce. Dorothy Mackaill and Ralph Forbes in "The Whip," Keith-Albee.

THROAT SPECIALIST

FOR THAT TICKLING FEELING in the gullet see the eminent chiropractor above. He cures your sore throat or you die in the attempt. Warner Richmond and Lawrence Gray in "Shadows of the Night."

Too Much Horizontalism?

Eva Von Berne, young Austrian actress newly arrived in Hollywood, recently saw her first football game. "How do you like it?" she was asked. "Oh," she exclaimed, "I am really very much interested, but I would like it much better if they would keep on running instead of falling down all the time."

STAGE AND SCREEN

Just a Nice Happy Home!

Samuel Pepys, that incorrigible critic in "And So To Bed," at the Plymouth, dilates on the estimable qualities of Mrs. Pepys. He says: "She is the best wife o' the world to me. I love her dearly. The house seems hell when she's abroad, and a hellish sort of heaven when she is at home."

NEW FILMS, TALKATIVE OR QUIESCENT, STRIVE TO HOLD THE MIRROR UP TO NATURE

THAT'S HIS WEAKNESS NOW. And it's easy to see what ales him. He likes mugs, fair ones and frothy ones. The plumes are Ruth Chatterton and the foam flecked moustache is Emil Jannings.

THE NAVY AGAIN! It must be the uniform. Ask any brakeman. Here are Jeanette Loff and Johnny Mack Brown in a filum called "Annapolis."

TWO JOLLY SCOUNDRELS are Lon Chaney and Lionel Barrymore in "West of Zanzibar," where there ain't no fish and game laws and a man can raise a beard. This is at Loew's State.

SILENCE WAS HER ANSWER, this lily white maid, as the Earl of Scoosie claimed the knuckles of her good hand all for his very own. Antonio Moreno and Colleen Moore (yes it is) in "Synthetic Sin."

"I'LL TAKE THIS ONE," decides Leatrice Joy as she makes her selection in the great grab-bag scene of "Man Made Women" at the Keith Memorial. John Boles is the prize and we do hope he doesn't mind.

LIGHT THAT FAILED FROM THE FILMS

By LEO GAFFNEY

AT this time of year even a movie editor may take account of stock. The "stock" in our particular case handily consists of the contents of a time-scarred, wooden filing cabinet. And although it be built like the kind that is built like a skyscraper, we have not yet felt either the necessity or the inclination to test its powers like the confident gentleman of the advertisements. This ill-used receptacle, faithful to its immediate environment, is ramshackle to a degree, but it contains the symbols of wealth and distinction—the photographs of the motion picture people.

* * *

DURING the last year the oft favored abode of stars has been steadily on the bulge. Lately, on account of its extremely overstuffed condition, it has become painfully apparent that something must be done to relieve the congestion within. Yesterday with a stab of resignation we removed our cuffs and fell to work upon the tottering, tanned mucilage.

* * *

AS the cinematographic carcasses of the great and successful razed up again in alphabetical order we felt like a murderer. Some of them must go. There must be extinctions, not to say extirpations. Steeling ourself for the ordeal, we gathered together all those whose stars have set—all those who have got fat, rich, married or who in any way have become intelligent, respectable or unfortunate enough to drop out of the films—these we hastily assembled and then stood by with the inward wastebasket.

PRISCILLA DEAN, Vina Dana, Nita Naldi, Shirley Mason, Ruth Roland, Sylvia Breamer, Carol Dempster, Bill Hart, Jack Hoxie, Mae Marsh, Gladys Walton, Virginia Pearson, Jane and Eva Novak and many, many more. Quenched seats all. The ghastly roster of the immortals took shape with fearful despatch. A frightful rush and they were gone. All but the ghastly aristocrats—the Novak. Pittoni ever locked up to her brutal executioner's block and had nice eyes), but by inscrutable wretch, was beyond entreaty and pitched her loathsome, writhing waiter below.

WELL, we are not near it yet. You can't go through these terrible experiences without them leaving a mark upon you. But if you think for one moment that we would thus annihilate the only feminine film favorite we ever had . . . ! No, no and Mae Marsh was saved. And if you will call around to our office any day between four and five in the morning we will let you see her pictures, providing you have the proper respect and can find us in.

* * *

THE movie public is a fickle thing. It doesn't take long for a player to be dead, professionally, and all of the above are dead in that sense. But a new life is possible to each of them through the talkers. Antonio Moreno, who now appears with Colleen Moore, came back from the valley of the shadow that way. And Pat O'Malley, begorra, has had a regular Lazarus awakening and is right up on his toes again. Now if someone would only bring Mae Marsh back to us—but perhaps a mere mundane agency oughtn't to have any such fine notions.

COMES HOME IN TRIUMPH

Morris Carnovsky

Morris Carnovsky, who is playing the important role of Kabbi Kaan in Theatre Guild's production of "Mayor Molineau," at the Hollis, is a former native of Russia. Coming to Boston with the Theatre Guild in "Processional," he played the part of Jed Hill, a strike agitator in the production at Harvard University. As a result he acquired a wide following among the students. He played the part of Lenin in "The Red Rumba" and was then selected to play the role of Ivan Orloff in "The Mayor Molineau." Before he made the natural awakening to New York, which was quite impressive to his Back Bay hosts, Morris was a student at Harvard, where he was the exclusive cynic of Broadway players who came to Boston and joined the Copley forces in "Processional."

Copley Player, a Singer, Spurns Musical Comedy

Possessor of a high-grade soprano voice, Dora deHaven will open at the E. E. Clive organization at the Copley theater.

While Miss deHaven has had many offers from musical comedy producers to step into leading roles, she declares that the dramatic field is her choice. A resume of her career would take all interesting chapters. A young actress who, during her stage work, has traveled a great deal and appeared in productions before audiences in several portions of the globe.

Miss deHaven was born in South Africa. In 1911 far away Britain possession she gained her education and the training for the stage. In her home city she made her professional debut which was but a stepping stone to greater successes in England, the Orient and America.

Werrenrath to Sing Many Old Favorites In Concert

Reinald Werrenrath will give his only recital in Boston this season tomorrow afternoon in Symphony Hall. The great baritone will sing only two airs of Mozart—"Alma," un po' from Figaro; also four songs of Richard Wagner, "Schlaf," "Im Treibhause," "Schmerzen," "Traume," the "Credo" from Verdi's "Otello," and a group of old-time concert favorites, including, "The Sands o' Dee" and "Gipsy John," by Frederic Clay; "Pincushello," by J. C. Bridge; "The Lost Chord," by Arthur Sullivan; "Give a Man a Horse He Can Ride," by Michael Head; "Cumberleigh Fair," by J. L. Holliday; "Star-Eyes," by Cecil Spooks, and "Fuzzy Wuzzy," by Arthur Wanting.

Tiny Louise Solves Puzzle of What She Shall Wear

Louise Lorraine

Louise Lorraine, who is one of the finest actresses on the screen, says that choosing the proper clothes is a constant problem for her and that she would rather have the hardest part in any picture than wrestling with their bewildering array. For in Miss Lorraine, I found that one of the most becoming costumes I have had in a long time was a sort of designed affair of velvet and fur worn in "Shadows of the Night," the latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture.

The picture is the screen attraction at Loew's Orpheum next week. The dress had quite large figures, which I thought for while but it proved just the opposite. A small woman can wear vivid colors if she is daring as I am but for a blonde I imagine the pastel shades would be a safer bet. But if the colors are right, she need not worry about large figured patterns; in fact, I think they are the most adaptable sort of costume.

SYMPHONY GUEST

Arthur Honegger, most distinguished among French composers of the younger generation, is making his first visit to America and has been invited to Boston to conduct his own music at the twelfth regular pair of Boston Symphony concerts in Symphony Hall, next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening.

TIBBETT'S DEBUT

Of the great singers whom Boston is yet to hear, probably the most important is Lawrence Tibbetts, the American baritone. This singer of the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York, will visit Boston for a recital in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, January 27.

Tolstoy Is Out of North With Spats-Clad Trapper

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 5 (A.P.)—After a 1000-mile journey into the North Country, Count Ilia Tolstoy, grandson of the poet Kossian nov, was back in civilization today with some heads shot on Caribou migration and a story gained by a trapper who has spent 25 of his 54 years here, as an Eskimo.

The Tolstoy expedition, which was sent out by the Museum of Natural History of New York about several months in the hope of finding 100 miles north of the Pas, Manitoba, now, when the Caribou cross by the thousands in their search for winter quarters. The trapper, who made his first trip out of the North Country in 15 years with the Tolstoy party, is George Vanhe who makes his home in a snow covered hut on the shore of Lake Neultin, several hundred miles north of here.

Today he had discarded his habitual garb of the Eskimo and was arrayed in the latest fashion of civilization. For the first time in 15 years he was wearing a pair of boots and a "store made" suit, and to cap the climax he added a pair of spats.

Bruins and Pirates in Ice War at Garden

POLO CAPTAIN. William H. Nichells, Jr., of New York, who will lead the Pennsylvania Military College poloists this year. His team has a very rugged schedule, meeting Harvard, Yale, Princeton and West Point. The P. M. C. mallet wielders are out to retain their indoor title.

RETURNS HOME. Frank Frederickson, recently sold to the Pirates, will be given a rousing reception when he faces off at center ice for Pittsburgh against the Bruins at the Garden tonight.

GUNNING AGAIN. Louis Kid Kaplan of Meriden, Ct., who formerly was featherweight champion of the world, is now after the lightweight crown which Sammy Mandell holds. He is under the direction of Billy Gibson.

WINTER SPORTS. Members of the Osborne Winter Sports Club are shown with their speedy boat in which they skim over the frozen surface of Lake Pleasant at Speculator, N. Y. The crew consists of Bertha Fabosky, Billy Fabosky, Sherwood Dunbar and Al Jacobson, all of whom live in Schenectady. It's great sport flying over the ice in a craft of this sort.

SCHOOLGIRLS NEED HEALTH

Daughter of Mrs. Catherine Lamuth Box 72, Monarch, Michigan

Daughter of Mrs. Eva Wood Hess 1006 South Hyer Danville, Ill.

"After my daughter grew into womanhood she ran in bad health, was run down and weak and a friend asked me to get her some of your medicine. She took Lydia L. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Herb Medicine. Her nerves are better, her appetite is good, she is in good spirits and able to work every day. We recommend the Vegetable Compound to other girls and to their mothers."—Mrs. Catherine Lamuth.

"I proved that Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is what it has done for my fourteen-year-old daughter as well as for me. It has helped her growth and her nerves and she has a good appetite now and sleeps well. She is going to school every day since beginning the medicine. I will continue to give it to her at regular intervals and will recommend it to other mothers who have daughters with similar troubles."—Mrs. Eva Wood Hess.

ABOUT RHEUMATISM

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

PERSONS past middle life often are affected by what they call rheumatism.

Sometimes these pains come on at long intervals. Sometimes they occur more or less continuously.

The pain is in the joints and there is a degree of stiffness present. The attack may become so severe that the involved joints are red and swollen and tender to pressure.

Several painful joints are the rule. The rheumatic symptoms, however, may recur again and again in a shoulder, or hip or knee.

Rheumatic attacks sometimes persist as a chronic and annoying aching sensation. There may also be occasional twinges which are sharp but quickly disappear.

Although rheumatism of this persistent variety should not be considered a dangerous disorder, years of it may produce considerable change in the joints themselves, such as enlargement and permanent stiffness and deformity, unfortunately.

Medical science does not yet know as much about rheumatism as it would like to know.

Poisons in the blood and tissues, an acid condition, may be a contributing factory. Undoubtedly exposure to damp and cold is a direct cause, but exactly what this does to the joints in inflaming them is not altogether clear.

Certainly persons who are subject to rheumatic attacks should avoid exposure and, if possible, climates which are too severe and changeable.

Moving into a warm climate from a cold one often prevents the regular rheumatic attacks.

Electrical treatment does little good as a rule. Baking and heat are often valuable. Great benefit may be had, too, from wrapping the affected part in cold, wet cloths, around which flannel is wrapped and on the outside of this, again, oil silk. Those who can afford it find relief very often by regular visits to spa watering places as Hot Springs, Arkansas, or Hot Springs, Virginia. Any locality giving hot, alkaline baths is desirable.

Various forms of what is known as counter-irritation may also help, bathing in a strong liniment and binding the part with flannel afterwards may reduce the pain.

And, then, of course, there is internal medication which only a physician should prescribe.

It is unwise to be disdainful of rheumatic pains, even if they occur only occasionally and are not severe.

A thorough physical examination should be given in any case, for teeth may be responsible, or tonsils which are diseased. The diet may also be at fault.

It is best not to treat symptoms only, but to be satisfied, before to find out, if possible, what is at the bottom of the trouble.

Rheumatism, which as I am talking about should not be confused with rheumatic fever. This usually attacks children and young people, may occur in epidemics, gives rise to high fever, marked involvement of the joints, and often leaves a weak heart in its wake.

Rheumatic fever is believed to be due to an infection, but what, still remains a mystery.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND

THERE is no use offering a woman a halo or a harvest wreath as long as she is secretly longing for orange blossoms.

There always comes the "morning after" romance, when a woman wonders how on earth she ever got into it, and a man wonders how on earth he can ever get out of it.

It is nothing in the world but her unconscionable idealism, that enables a woman to find the pure gold of a man's love underneath all the dross of masculine selfishness.

A man likes a woman who is like a perfect Indian summer day—glowing, tender, gay and warm—but NOT intense.

There have been women who had no time for sewing, no time to curl their hair and even no time for love and marriage, but there never yet lived a woman who had no time to stop and listen to a rich and racy piece of gossip.

Many a woman tries to hold love by closing all the exits, and thus bastens its death by suffocation.

A flapper is highly amused at a married woman's "narrow-minded" jealousy, but somehow, after she's married her husband's one of her own, she sees all that broad-minded jealousy toward the "community ownership" of husbands.

A man never realizes that he is no longer a boy, until he wakes up to discover that his college ideals and his college jokes are beginning to be as mothballed as his college pennants and pillows.

A woman's regret at the loss of a good umbrella or a stepping husband is always softened by the comforting reflection that she won't have to keep her eye on them, any longer.

MARTHA LEE TELLS OF HAM RECIPES

A STRIP of bacon in the house and a thick end of ham is the modern equivalent to the well filled larder of our grandparents. They take but little room and are most convenient and may be purchased economically. Their uses are legion.

No meats are used more in cooking than pork products. Take pork chops, for instance—the great majority of housewives think only of them in connection with frying. It is true that when they are fried right they are delicious but there are many other ways to cook them —en casserole, breaded, blanked, in apple rings, with puddings, sliced in baking dish, etc. A little thoughtful originality will bring much appreciation from your family, you'll find.

Now that fresh pork is available the year round, it can be enjoyed in great variety.

The shoulder butt and steak shoulder are economical pieces to purchase. The shoulder butt is a small, compact piece of meat which may be sliced and fried, pot roasted and roasted.

The steak shoulder may also be sliced into pork cutlets which may be breaded and fried or it may be roasted the same way as the loin. The breaded pork shoulder presents an entirely different flavor to the family dinner table. The meat is tender and juicy as well as economical. Try having it boned and rolled by your butcher and then stuff it with a bread dressing, seasoned with celery and apples chopped finely, before roasting.

Here's a time table for cooking pork: Pork chops or steaks, 10 to 15 minutes; loin roast, per pound, 20 to 25 minutes; hand, per pound, 30 to 35 minutes; hand, baked, per pound, 20 to 25 minutes; ham, boiled, per pound, 20 to 30 minutes.

And here are some favorite pork recipes: Chop fine four cold boiled potatoes, seasoned slightly with salt and dispose in an au gratin dish. Pour in milk or cream to come nearly to the top of the potatoes. Prick the casings of one pound of sausages and lower them in a frying basket into a kettle of hot fat (count 60, then remove and dispose over the potatoes.

For a small frying kettle cook the sausage in two lots, half pound at a time. Pour over the sausage a cupful of rather thick, white sauce, one made with chicken or veal broth preferred. Use 2½ tbsp. of flour and 2 tbsps. of butter to the c. of liquid. Cover the sauce with ½ c. of cracker crumbs mixed with 4 tbsps. of melted butter. Let bake about 15 minutes.

Fried Corn Meal Mush and Ham—1 qt. boiling water, ½ tsp. salt, 1 cup cornmeal, ½ cup diced cooked ham, ½ cup cold water.

Stir cold water into cornmeal to avoid its lumping when stirred into boiling water. Add to boiling salted water. Stir five minutes, placing kettle directly over fire. Remove, place over hot water cover and cook one hour. Add ham, pour into small greased bread pan, chill, slice thin and fry.

Smothered Ham — Slice ham 2 inches thick, 6 whole cloves, 1 cup stale bread crumbs, 1 cup milk or water, ½ tsp. salt, pepper to season, 1 tbsp. chopped onion, brown sugar. Have the slice cut from the middle of the ham. Cover with cold water, heat to the boiling point and simmer for 40 minutes. Drain and put in baking pan. Stick cloves in the top. Scald the milk, add the bread crumbs and soak until soft. Then add seasonings and spread over the ham. Cover the bread with a layer of brown sugar and bake in a moderate oven for 45 minutes or until the top is crisp and brown.

Ham and Corn Fritters—1 cup minced cooked ham, 1 can corn, 1 cup flour, 1¼ tsps. salt, ¼ tsp. paprika, 2 eggs, 1 tsp. baking powder.

Chop corn, drain and add dry ingredients, mixed and sifted, then add ham and yolks of eggs beaten until thick, and whites of eggs beaten stiff. Cook in frying pan in fresh hot lard. Drain on paper.

Casserole of Ham and Oysters—¼ cup chopped ham, ¼ cup flour, ½ tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. pepper, 2 cups cream or 1 cup evaporated milk and 1 cup water, 2 eggs, ½ lb. American cheese, paprika, 2 cups cold diced ham, 2 pints oysters, scalded and drained, 1-3 cup finely chopped celery.

Make a sauce of the first seven ingredients, add ham and oysters. Put into casserole and add beaten yolks of eggs and celery. Beat whites, cut and fold into the mixture. Sprinkle grated cheese and paprika over the top and bake in hot oven.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE.

MERELY THE BAER FACTS

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

NO news is more startling than the Remized industrial bomb just touched off in Detroit.

Henry Ford is counseling 30,000 more men to go to work.

If Mr. Ford continues at his present reckless rate of prosperity hens will become so scarce that we will erect statues to them.

It is peculiarly impossible to visualize 30,000 men all banging away at the same rivet.

With the recent addition of industrious flivver students the standing army of the U. S. A. is out numbered.

These 30,000 men all work. There are no kibbitzers in the Ford factory.

The complete master for Henry's eruptive bungalow is now 150,000 citizens.

We would hate to be in the middle of the prosperous huddle when those 150,000 men start telling each other what to do.

And that's only a few of the men employed by Henry. He owns his own railroads, his own mines and the men get together every year to elect their own postmaster and secretary of labor.

To this army you must add 150,000 wives. There's a city of 300,000.

While we know the production of the Ford plant, we are not certain about the children.

We will allow four children to a family, making 600,000. A sum which is at least three sizes larger than a total.

There's 300,000 people. Don't forget the police force, the letter carriers, the druggists, the grocers and the tradesmen essential to supply the folks with merchandise.

And you will find that Henry is the mayor of a town that isn't on the map.

Well, Henry may not know history.

But he certainly can make it.

A BOY OF BOYS GREW IN WISDOM

The first chapter of "A Boy of Boys Grew in Wisdom" was published last week, and described the boy tending his sheep and, suddenly discovering a storm had arisen, and that he must hurry his charges to their fold. He had reached the hill top.

There, in the warmth and eagerness, was his mother, anxiously awaiting her children. Even now the night he prepared the Sabbath feast. Earlier possibly had been family prayers and, with reading from the book of the law and the Prophets filled with brave deeds of great men who had given life and death to Israel, he would have said that he was very hungry and that the wind was sending shivers down his back. Hence—what a delight! A place to draw nearer the very cozy wool-ling its way ahead of the lordly few and slow beasts acting as guide.

The young shepherd knew of a short cut which would bring him and his charges home more quickly to their journey's end. The beaten path led up over the smooth brow of the hill to the left and then other branched off to the right and ran through a section of quarry holes and cypress trees mixed with a half dozen or more old and gnarled olives. The longer way was the safer, but because of the lateness of the hour he chose the shorter and more rugged way was chosen.

PASSES BY QUARRIES.

Shadows were now becoming black and the boy could scarcely see the bodies of the flock. A very dark and ominous cloud was coming up which made the earth seem as dusky as night. The wind as it rushed through the branches of the vicinity olive trees sighed and moaned, half-whisper, half-shout. He had often been told there was no danger on the hills day or night, but even still a childish dread and darkness gave to his heart a quicker beat as the thought of the long mile ahead and the rough side trail he must climb insisted upon taking urge as he would.

The shepherd knew at several points the path set here close to the quarries' pits and he tried to push the flock to a safety level. This prevented him seeing the leaders of the flock now, and when he did distinguish the clip forms of but two or three of the sheep he knew he had not passed and they emerged onto smooth and even ground. He stopped a moment to get his breath.

THINKS HE HEARS A SOUND.

His face suddenly grew tense as he listened, for he thought he heard something like a storm-like sound mixed bleat, a cry of some dumb beast for help. The wind, however, was playing pranks among the rocks and trees, and one could not be sure of anything. As nothing more was heard, the boy ran to catch up with his flock that had now begun to feel more confidence and were headed directly for their warm shed.

Ten minutes later and the homecomers emerged from the mist and fog which had now become almost rain and all appreciated the stone enclosure and nearby house with emotions of joy. The boy caught a glean coming from the window of his home and beyond in other houses were gleams which became exaggerated through the misty night.

GLAD TO BE HOME

How full of wonder was that night that could so penetrate the black darkness, and what promise it held for the hungry and the weary and wet. He could scarcely wait until he pushed the last sheep through the rough gate and closed it for the night.

To make sure, however, he opened it again, entered the fold and counted the sheep one by one. He patted the moist heads as they passed under the protecting roof and settled for a night's rest. Each one he called by name: David, Michael, Isaiah, Amos, Jeremiah, Ruth, Joseph, Sampson, the big one; Solomon, the wise old ram; Manoah, Isaac, Judith, Moses, Jonah, and Tobiah. The boy's hand reached out to find the lamb, but it was not there. The search was not limited. Again and again the boy searched every corner of the enclosure and he threw his cap down ahead in desperate hope of discovering Tobiah, but without result.

The truth had to be faced. One of the flock had been lost. Out somewhere in the storm and darkness the poor lamb was crying for help. With the tenderness of a mother the boy's eyes filled with tears.

ONE SHEEP WAS LOST

What was to be done? On the one side a great room of warmth and love. There was food and light and at a warm bed of wool for tired limbs. There was a boy's heaven with a mother to put her arms around him as she had done did before he fell asleep. There was his father to read a story of great men and mighty achievements, and prophets who stood for right in face of danger. There was companionship and the admiration of those dear ones who would make much of his birthday. Yes, there were waiting hands. There was the baby whom the boy loved to take in his arms to pat and fondle and kiss and receive a dimpled smile.

On the other side was the dark and foreboding mountain with black holes and strange shapes, a storm of mist and clouds and rain, the wind whistling. There was the unknowable, the wild and uncomprehensible, possibly demons of the earth and air.

The sad thought again of what he had to do. There would be no sleep, no rest, no food, no comfort. There would be real danger on the hill, no wild beast had been seen for several years, but danger there was and why not this night. He would rise early and in the morning go out and find the lamb. There would be no sport in it, no warm coat of wool, but it would be a manly thing to do. He would be a regular leader indeed. The lamb was poor and could not go far. It was probably not very cold.

Was every boy so stimulated? A few stories of his own in his mind seemed to say that he was. Was not the search for the shepherd David during his shepherd days? Could not the boy Samuel have been stimulated by the same thoughts? Had not Tobiah fallen over a precipice and was he not in need of help? Was not Jonah in the belly of the whale? Was not Daniel in the lion's den? Was not Moses in the bulrushes? Was not Joseph in the pit? Was not Ruth in the fields beyond? Was not Esther in the palace? Was not Nehemiah in the wilderness? Yes, I must go, my lamb, and his sensibility was not set at rest.

A figure was coming toward him, and out of the fog with a mantle over her head appeared his mother.

"Why, my son, where have you been. We looked for you long ago. Do you not know the Sabbath is here, and even now your father has called us to prayers?" She took him gently by the arm. "Why, you are wet and cold. Come in at once where I may give you warm and dry clothing."

"I cannot go in, mother; I have lost a lamb back a little way in the path. I heard it bleat, so I know where it is. I shall not be long. Tell father, I am sure he will not be angry, and I can come right back."

When the mother saw and understood her son's determination, she reluctantly consented, and with a mother's kiss on his cheek, a child, just 12, courageously faced about, confronted the towering darkness of the night, the rushing power of a storm and his own natural dread of being alone on the mountain and set forth to find a lamb lost in the hills.

This story will be continued next week.

Your Pastor's Hobby—What Is It?

The Rev. Kenneth C. Gesner of Waltham belongs to the impressionistic school, and puts his paint on his canvas with broad strokes.

1929 Vision From Mt. Pisgah

By the Rev. Stanley G. Spear, Associate Minister of the First Federated Church of Boston—Berna Vista St., Roxbury.

On this New Year's Sunday we are standing on Mt. Pisgah that we may gain a view from every point of the compass so that we may judge what the possibilities for the new year really are.

We have, as the First Federated Church of Boston, worked harmoniously together to the great ends which Christianity is set to serve. From the vantage ground of accomplishment we can phophesy a future drawing together of churches and denominations in the interest of a more vital and spiritual Christianity. There is today so little which divides and so much which unites that we see no reason why all Christians may not walk together in that "way" which Jesus opened to his followers. From this Pisgah of 1929 we see not only greater unity for the Christian church but also greater unity for the nations of the world. A drawing together in the interests of peace. We are surely going to outlaw war, if not in 1929 then soon, and when we have done that successfully, we shall have buried deep one of the great major fears of mankind. There can be no real progress where constant fear prevails. From this mount we can see also a growing interest in industrial betterment. We can see that democracy is advancing and that old tyrannies must go. And the end will be the promised land.

The First Federated Church of Boston, consisting of the First Universalist and the Winthrop St. Methodist Episcopal churches have been worshipping together for two years in perfect harmony and accord. Two ministers share the work and all services are held together.

By careful planning and hearty co-operation of all concerned we find that it is possible for brethren to dwell together in unity because we all want to conserve the spirit of brotherhood. I want to testify after two years of experience that I feel that closer union of all Christian bodies is entirely possible if we go to work in the right spirit and practice the Golden Rule.

HOLY FEAST TO PREPAREDNESS, BE OBSERVED FORUM SUBJECT

As the solemn Feast of the Most Holy Name of Jesus draws near, the men of the archdiocese of Boston look forward to their annual union services which will be held in the most convenient centers tomorrow afternoon. Members of the Holy Name Society from all the parishes will gather at the designated churches to give a public profession of their love and devotion to the Saviour.

Shortly after his accession to the see of Boston, His Eminence the Cardinal determined upon this method of honoring in special way the Holy Name of Jesus on the Feast which occurs the first Sunday of each New Year. The great demonstration given was a mammoth parade of Holy Name men which passed through the streets of Boston in review before thousands of spectators come from far and near to witness it.

Lieut. Joseph J. Hurley, member of the Boston school committee, will speak at the Common Cause Forum tomorrow evening on "The Necessity of Military and Naval Defense." This public address will be delivered in Franklin Union hall, corner of Appleton and Berkeley sts., Boston. The doors will open at 7 p. m. and the lecture at 8 o'clock sharp.

Since in charge of the forum he (Lieut. Hurley) is especially well-equipped to discuss this subject, as he is a member of the American Legion, has been active as a lecturer and has spoken several times on the questions described preparedness questions with public forums.

The Common Cause Forum is generous in its plan of giving speakers a free hand in their lectures and not to ask questions, but to give personal opinions as well. A large audience is predicted for tomorrow evening.

J. M. Bird Called "Spirit Detective"

Mr. Bird, who will be the speaker at the Old South Meeting House forum tomorrow afternoon, has been a research officer for the Society of Psychical Research and had much to do with the medium Margery. He was at one time associate editor of the Scientific American, and will approach his subject tomorrow, "Psychic Phenomena as a Scientist Sees Them," in a scientific spirit.

HOBBIES ARE POPULAR WITH THE CLERGY

Modern educators declare that play should merge with shaping character in the very young than anything else. How much does it have to do in preserving the balance of character when it is once established? What part do recreation, play and the riding of hobbies have in keeping the old young, the serious-minded from depression, the over-worked from collapse?

These questions we propose to answer in a series of articles on "Hobbies of Clergymen." Most of the ministers of Greater Boston know how to escape from the daily round of preaching, parish calling, conference attending, and disappear into another world.

CLERGY TELL OF HOBBIES

Scores of answers which have come in from a questionnaire show how these clerical boys grown to manhood spend their leisure moments and vacation days. There is a wide variety, and what suits one person another. Many hobbies are found in places where hobbies are least expected, and a number of dignified and reverend gentlemen have written about pastimes which are in complete contrast to their professional duties. The articles will run each Saturday in the church page of the Boston Evening American.

We begin with one of the younger men, who has but recently come into our area, but who believes his hobby is one that should appeal to all professional men and women.

A REVEREND PAINTER

When the Rev. Kenneth C. Gesner of the First Parish Church, Waltham, comes to the end of his tether, feels his nerves snapping and begins to look upon his church duties with flagging enthusiasm, he knows exactly what medicine he needs.

He quietly closes his Bible, pushes his files and catalogues into their proper places, and then dons an unclerical suit of clothes. Once properly arrayed he puts from a shelf a box of paints, a bundle of brushes, and a palette. Softly he closes the kitchen door behind him and finds toward the woods as a bee makes for the honey.

The Rev. Kenneth Gesner loves to paint, delights in mixing colors to match up with nature, and then so plasters them upon his canvas as to create a picture.

In five minutes troubles and perplexities have flown from his mind, unsympathetic deacons and exacting church ladies are as much there never existed, and there are the dark green trees, the blue sky, the clustering snow and purple hills.

WONDERFUL COLORS APPEAR

All this color comes into the heart of the painter as a rainbow after a storm.

"One does not have to be a Turner," says the clergyman, "to develop a color sense that greatly enhances nature. An artist finds in nature a radiance and glory undreaming of, which opens a new door for him. We become awake to glories we scarcely suspected before. When I paint I do not think so much about what I can do as about what nature can do for me. It takes years of study to extract from the clouds and the sea and from the hills and sky the beauty that is really there. James Russell Lowell says: 'To paint a shine that is not there is to paint a lie.'

"No great is set on the lavish summer.

June may be had by the poorest comer."

JUNE AND SUMMER PAID FOR.

June cannot be had by the poorest comer, I mean the full meaning and richness of June, but years of work and study very hard in order to get from there and of summer what June have to offer."

The Rev. Gesner comes naturally by his love for painting honestly. His father, who is a clergyman also and located in Marlboro, finds the same charming hobby. Together, father and son often of a summer's day "go to seem with paint and brush capturing a hillside or imprisoning the glories of a sunset over the sea on their canvases.

Common Cause

Church Given Paintings

Hanging on the east wall of the Wellesley Congregational Church are four beautiful religious paintings by the late and noted American artist, W. L. Taylor. These splendid Biblical scenes were presented to the church, and formally accepted last Sunday. Hundreds of churchgoers remained after the morning service to look at Mr. Taylor's creations. In money value this gift is worth probably above $20,000, but there is sentiment attached to it, as the artist was a member of the Wellesley congregation. All four pictures have at various times been printed in the Ladies' Home Journal. The picture here reproduced is titled "I to the Hills Will Lift Mine Eyes." Dr. Stanley Ross Fisher invites all lovers of beautiful pictures to come and see.

POINTS HIS PEN AT BRETHREN

Zion's Herald editor takes exception to action of Methodist ministers in Philadelphia, who made a demand that the Methodist paper, the Epworth Herald, print no more articles from Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick of New York City.

The ministers warned Dr. H. J. Grafe, editor of the Epworth Herald, that unless immediate steps were taken to eliminate the offending articles, more drastic action would be taken among the local chapters of Epworth Leagues.

The editor of the Boston Zion's Herald writes forthwith and frankly. "A worse ill could not befall the humiliating and discouraging Methodism, we are very certain that it is not. Bishop Frank J. McConnell says:

"Where is the leadership among the ministers of Philadelphia? Can not some men be found who will endeavor to change the Methodist atmosphere of the city from one of narrow, intolerant dogmatism to one that will correspond in some degree to the principles laid down by Jesus Christ? Otherwise, Whereof?

"We know that Dr. Fosdick will an straight with his work of edifying the Epworth Herald.

League of Neighbors "Ideals for 1929"

A New Year feast of words and reason will take place at the League of the Neighborhood tomorrow evening at 398 Boylston st. A symposium will give opportunity for 10 well-known citizens to speak on the theme of their ideals this coming year. In order the speakers are Rabbi Samuel Abrams, Count Fredrich von Crome, Rev. R. Klabsatter, Lester Bassett, Miguel A. Pena Sardeng, the Rev. Dr. Horace Westwood, Dr. Nasim Khouri, Gardner Jackson, Stockton Raymond, the Rev. Ingram W. Swain. Each speaker represents a different faith or cause. Supper at 6:30. The public cordially invited. The symposium will start at 8 p. m.

Evangelist

The Rev. A. Earl Kernahan, D.D.

On Sunday, January 27, there will begin in Greater Boston a campaign of visitation evangelism which will touch all parts of the city. Dr. Kernahan, who is leading the drive, is the movement with the backing and co-operation of the Greater Boston Federation of Churches, has conducted such movements in eighty cities with considerable success. He tells of more than a hundred thousand converts during his activities of the last few years. It is claimed there, he states, accepted Christianity for the first time. Quite often there were from 1000 to 2000 who took the path. Today he feels sure if the hundred or more cities that have signified their interest in the Boston campaign will exert themselves as churches have in other cities, attention will see a widespread movement toward the churches of all denominations. There is a feeling that some churches that they cannot come into the campaign for some reason or another, but are glad to have the work done. To these Dr. Kernahan appeals for more definite assistance, assuring them that in union is strength and power.

While this method is not new, it will be unique in Boston on such a widespread scale. The signing up of 200 churches at the present time to take part in this great Protestant co-operative ingathering should, he believes, set a standard for the rest of the country to follow. He will, therefore, bend every effort to bring success and a revival of true religious fervor among all the people. Details of the campaign may be had at 0023 Haymarket.
